AMERICAN FILM STAR SCOFFS AT LOVE SUIT

Lois Meredith.

New York, March 30 (I.N.S.).—Lois Meredith is the motion picture star mentioned in the course of the recent Dennistoun trial in London, but she is not the American woman who is suing Colonel Ian Dennistoun for breach of promise.

"In fact, there is no such suit, and if Attorney Dudley Field Malone files such suit it will be without her authorization."

This statement was made today by a "very close friend" of the movie actress, upon whom silence has been imposed by counsel since the day "the American woman" was first mentioned in the questioning of Colonel Dennistoun in his former wife's suit to recover moneys advanced to him—a suit that rattled some of the choicest skeletons in the closet of the upper crust of English society.

"I do not know Mr. Malone and

CHAPMAN IDENTIFIED IN COURT AS SLAYER OF OFFICER SKELLY

By BERT FORD

Hartford, Ct., March 30.—Gerald Chapman, outlaw extraordinary, was identified in open court today by Patrolman Alfred E. Atwater of New Britain as the slayer of Patrolman James E. Skelly.

Atwater, member of the New Britain police force for twenty-one years, big and phlegmatic, facing Chapman and levelling a long finger, exclaimed dramatically: "That man there fired three times at Skelly."

"Did he say anything?

"Yes; he said to me, 'Get down there or I'll kill you.'"

Patrolman Atwater raised his voice and it trembled as he made this grim accusation.

An uncanny silence prevailed in the thronged court room.

Chapman, his face the color of death, head slightly tilted to the left, studied Atwater without a trace of emotion.

DENIES COWARD BRAND.

Cross-examined by Judge Grothl, Atwater said he is fifty-six years of age, denied that he had defective eyesight or had ever been branded a coward because of alleged misconduct at a fire.

Q.—Did you notice this man's piercing eyes? A.—No. I did not have time for that.

Q.—What did you notice about the

JAIL GIRL FRIENDS OF 'BOUDOIR BANDIT'

MERRIMACK RIVER UP 7 FEET; BIG PROPERYT LOSS IN MANY TOWNS

With seven buildings destroyed thus far and with streams steadily rising under the brunt of the continued heavy rains, New England today was faced with a property loss by floods reaching into the hundreds of thousands of dollars.

The Merrimac River was reported as "rising every hour," and the highest water since 1901 was predicted by officials of the Locks and Canals Corporation.

At Springfield, the Connecticut River swelled an additional two feet, making a total of six feet it had risen. Farther north the river was nearly fourteen feet above mean low water.

SIX BUILDINGS SWEPT AWAY.

Six buildings were swept away at Randolph, Vt., by branch waters of the White River pouring over its banks.

A seventh building, one of four tenements, was burned to prevent it swerving downstream and carrying away a new cement bridge connecting two sections of the village.

To date the property damage through floods in marked up at well over $300,000.

Two dams were carried away in Randolph, with attendant loss of factory power, and water mains in the town were torn away. Damage is set at $50,000.

At Manchester, N. H., the Merrimac River was thundering over the flash board of the dam 7.1 feet above its normal height, and the Daniel Webster Highway, near Franklin, was more than a foot under water.

STORM STARTS THINGS.

Primary cause of the flood conditions is the old-fashioned "Nor'easter" that has deluged New England since Saturday, mixing in snow, rain, sleet and fog.

The storm is expected to pass out to sea tonight, according to Forecaster Loveland, giving place to clear, cool weather.

The low pressure area which has been the cause of the unusual rains was to pass out to sea Saturday night, but was held up by a stationary high pressure area in the Atlantic.

Today, however, the storm centre

MAYOR GOING TO OIL "GUSHER" IN TEXAS

Mayor Curley will leave tomorrow to investigate a report that a Texas oil well in which he is interested has suddenly become a fortune-spouting gusher. He will be accompanied by several Boston men, including "a big Boston lawyer" whom he refused today to name.

"We are leaving the South Station at 8:30 o'clock tomorrow morning," he said. "Our destination is about seventy-five miles inland from Galveston."

TEX RICKARD FINED $7,000, NO JAIL TERM

Newark, N. J., March 30.—Tex Rickard, nationally known fight promoter, today was fined $7,000 by Federal Judge Bodine for conspiracy to violate the law prohibiting interstate transportation of prize fight films.

Rickard and four others were convicted in Federal Court in Trenton on March 19. The charge was brought in connection with transportation of the Dempsey-Carpentier films.

Fred Quimby, New York motion picture producer, and Jasper C. Muma, Washington and New York newspaperman, were fined $7,000 each. Teddy Hayes of Los Angeles, former secretary to Jack Dempsey, was fined $1,000, and Frank B. Flournoy, Madison Square Garden matchmaker, $1,000.

Rickard, Quimby and Muma were fined $5,000 each on the count charging conspiracy and $1,000 each on each of the two counts charging transportation.

Judge Bodine fined Hayes and Flournoy only $1,000 each as they

GET 4 SUSPECTS IN BEVERLY CRIME

After a State-wide search, State and East Boston police early today arrested four men in East Boston on the charge of complicity in the $25,000 robbery at the Summer home of Barrett Andrews, publisher of the Boston Evening American, at North Beverly, on March 10.

The four men in custody are Frank J. Hoyle of No. 123 Meridian street, East Boston; Jerry Gedzium of Cambridge, Louis Marino of No. 5 Lamson street, East Boston, and Jerry Capelreas scandal.

The patient is unable to move one side of his body being paralyzed.

GIRLS IN WOLF CASE FIGHT EXTRADITION

New York, March 30.—Mrs. Lillian Lewis and Mrs. Edith Pommell, both of No. 198 Manhattan avenue, appeared before Magistrate Lavine today in an attempt to obtain bail on the charge of receiving property stolen by James E. Walters, Boston's Lone Wolf.

Originally arraigned before Magistrate Lavine, after having been found with stolen fur coats and diamond rings in their possession, they were ordered held without bail.

Upon objection of counsel for the young women, Magistrate Lavine reconsidered and agreed to continue the case until today when the district attorney was to be called on to fix reasonable bail.

The girls appeared shocked when detectives, led by Frank C. McLean, a Boston EVening American reporter, informed them the gifts lavished on them by the Lone Wolf were stolen.

"Why," said Mrs. Lewis, "I paid him $150 for the coat and the ring I believed him implicitly, he was such a dumbbell. He was always a gentleman, though."

"I cannot believe anything so horrible."

HUNT PARTY OF FIVE 'LOST' IN CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, March 30.—Scores of men, including mountain guides and rangers, set out from Lake Arrowhead today to search for an automobile party of three men and two women, who mysteriously disappeared on the "Rim of the World" road in the San Bernardino Mountains. The missing party included Miss Lucille Stewart, sister of Anita Stewart, film actress; Mr. and Mrs. V. A. Mulley, David Mendleson and W. K. Hartman, all of Hollywood.

MOTHER OF FORBES ALSO HAS SHOCK

Mrs. Charles R. Forbes of Hopkinton suffered a shock when informed that her son, Colonel Charles R. Forbes, was stricken with apoplexy while visiting at his sister's home in Brighton.

Colonel Forbes, formerly head of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, has been removed to the Hart Hospital in Roxbury. Noted specialists are in consultation.

His mother, according to early reports from Hopkinton, is in nearly as bad a way as her son, and physicians are in constant attendance.

The doctors attending Colonel Forbes doubt that their patient will live to complete his appeal from the sentence recently imposed upon him in connection with the Veterans' bu-

TO REINSTATE SIX DEMOTED P. O. MEN

Captain J. N. Greig of Boston and five other postal supervisors, suspended January 2, were today ordered restored to duty with demotion, by Postmaster-General New.

The men were suspended as a result of activities connected with the campaign that resulted in the increase in wages of postal employes.

The reinstatement followed the adoption of resolutions seeking clemency for the supervisors, which were adopted by postal employes' organizations.

The six postoffice supervisors were accused of paying sums of money to E. H. McDermott, assistant secretary to Senate Committee on Postoffices and Post Roads.

Greig, who was postal cashier at Boston at a salary of $4,100, was reduced to money order cashier at $3,700 under the reinstatement order.

Peter McGarrity, who was superintendent of mails at New York at $4,100, was reduced to assistant superintendent of mails there at $3,500. Peter Wiggin, assistant postmaster at Detroit at $4,600, was reduced to assistant superintendent of mails at $3,500. Harvey M. Tittle, assistant postmaster at Springfield, Ohio, at $3,900, was reduced to money order cashier at $3,000. L. J. Fields, superintendent of mails at Louisville, Ky., at $4,800, was reduced to superintendent of a Main street station there at $3,900, and William Sarsson, assistant superintendent of delivery at Chicago, at $4,100 was reduced to railway mail service clerk, grade five, at $2,440.

R. I. BARGE CAPTAIN SLAIN IN HIS CABIN

Providence, R. I., March 30.—Captain John Vincent of East Providence, of the barge C. C. & B. No. 3, moored at a local wharf, was found shot and stabbed to death in the cabin of his barge today. The absence of any motive left the police at a loss to account for the slaying.

The body was found by a deckhand of a tug that had steamed alongside to take the barge in tow.

FACTS FOR THE PUBLIC

During the past three months the Building Trades Employers' Association of Boston in the many joint conferences on new agreements held with the Trades Unions Employees' Committees has most earnestly endeavored to show reasonable convincing proof to all building trades unions that neither present business nor future outlook for building construction work warrants any increase in wages.

The Building Trades Employers' Association has asked for a renewal of the existing agreements and present wages for three years in order to be able to encourage building construction and establish public confidence as well as assure continuous employment at present high wage rates to its employees.

The agreements now offered by the Building Trades Employers' Association give all mechanics, except the bricklayers, plasterers and tile layers, $1.10 per hour, or $8.80 per day of eight hours, with a double time rate of $2.20 per hour for all overtime work performed. $1.25 per hour is the wage for bricklayers, plasterers and tile layers, with a double-time rate of $2.50 per hour for all overtime work.

As many false rumors and misleading impressions are now being put into circulation by the representatives of certain unions regarding what the wages will be on and after April 1st, 1925, notice is hereby given that no agreements have been made that contain any increases in wages, and no agreements will be signed by the Building Trades Employers' Association that carry in them any higher wage rates than are mentioned above, and which are the wages now in force.

The Building Trades Employers' Association will protect all its employees and members to the fullest extent of its moral and financial powers. Any person or body of persons who may cause, or may attempt to cause, our employees to break their contracts and agreements with us are liable and will be held to the full penalties of the law.

rible of him, he was such a nice chap," added Mrs. Pommell.

Both women met Walters in the St. Nicholas dance hall, 66th street and Columbus avenue, where he also encountered Mrs. Anna Todd of No. 156 8th avenue, who turned over to the police a white gold ring set with a moonstone which had been given her by Walters.

Mrs. Lewis and Mrs. Pommell seemed unconcerned when they were arraigned in the West 154th Street Court, but when the magistrate refused to admit them to bail, declaring it was a serious matter and he would hold them until he heard from the Boston officers, the girls lost their composure. In police headquarters, where they were taken, the tears grew into sobs and then into violent weeping, their condition requiring the services of a physician.

Today the young women had recovered their nerve, and represented by counsel declared they would fight extradition to Boston.

Lone Wolf Scoffs at Serving Term in Massachusetts State Prison

The Boston Evening American today publishes the third instalment of the confession of James E. Walters, the Lone Wolf, whose story of his participation in the holdup and robbery of Edith Robe, New York modiste, appeared exclusively in this publication.

By FRANK C. McLEAN.

James E. Walters, the Lone Wolf, refreshed himself with a cigarette, stretched luxuriously and waxed philosophical.

"Listen, kid," he declared impressively. "Don't ever worry. There's no percentage to that racket, and don't let anyone tell you different. Say, if I worried I'd of been in the booby house long ago.

"I never worried over any of my jobs. I go out and make a jump and maybe I get knocked off and maybe I don't. It's all part of the game.

"Over in New York, before I took part in the Edith Robe job, I sure did all pretty. The dough came easy, there were plenty of places to go for a good time, and the town was full of dames. Baby, what dames. They don't care where you get your jack as long as you get it. And believe me they sure do know how to milk a guy.

"I remember one time I saw a copper standing on a corner, where he'd been all night. He's a cop himbo, at that. He has overshoes on to keep his little tootsies warm while he's on guard, and anybody could tell he's been watching out all night. I felt like taking him for a ride, but decided not to and went on my way.

"As I said, I got the idea here in Boston to look over the women. I'd been roaming around the streets, doing a little prowling, and I figured to myself how easy it would be, what with a gun and getting the jump on them and everything. A couple of shoves I'd seen, like the Rat, and some looks I'd read had helped too.

"So I laid around the Back Bay and spotted this Kelley dame, and believe me, kid, she was the goods. I found out her apartment, and that night in January I climbed up the fire escape and into the dump before she got home. She gave me a battle at that, but I think it was more excitement than anything. What between the gat and my line of soft salve I didn't have much trouble.

"I told her when I left in the morning that I'd fix it so she would get untied, and I telephoned the janitor to call her and break down the door. I could see the united herself, though. I didn't mean the walls and attracting the attention of someone. I had that all figured out in advance.

"And at first the coppers didn't believe her story. What do you think of that? So when I pulled some of the other jobs, I called up the newspapers. I wanted everyone to know who was doing the stuff. That's the way I got a lot of kick.

BRIDE SMILES AGAIN AFTER VISIT TO WALTERS IN JAIL

Four poses of Mrs. James E. Walters on the day of her latest visit to the "Lone Wolf" in his cell in Charles Street Jail. The first three were taken as she primped to make her best appearance before the man she still loves despite the confession of his "caveman" affairs with other women. The fourth on the extreme right shows the transformation the sight of her husband effected. In the first photo on the left she is seen packing his shaving soap, razors and other toilet articles for his use. The shaving set, however, was denied him by the jail officials.

ARRESTED AS SUSPECTS.

The men were rounded up by State Officers Stokes and Ferrari, formerly of Station 1 of the Boston police force, and Sergeant Hurley of the East Boston station.

Two of the men were taken at De Vito's garage in East Boston and the other pair were taken at their homes. It is said by the police that earlier in the day the men had been away together in Marino's automobile.

The men were arrested on the technical charge of being suspicious persons, and were at once taken to Salem and lodged in jail.

TWO HAVE RECORDS.

According to Officer Ferrari, the arrest of the men marks the end of a chase which has continued incessantly since the Andrews home was entered and furnishings and objects of art worth a small fortune were carried away by the thieves.

The search was made state-wide and added interest was aroused by the large rewards offered by Mr. Andrews for the apprehension of the men.

At least two of the four men arrested have criminal records, O'Boyle was in court on one occasion and was paid a fine for bootlegging, while Capello has been convicted of breaking and entering.

NEW ARRESTS IN SINKING OF ITALIAN WARSHIP

London, March 30 (I.N.S.).—An echo of a sensation of the great war stirred Italy today when it became known, according to a Central News dispatch, that new secret arrests had been made in connection with the blowing up of the Italian warship Da Vinci in a harbor of the Adriatic Sea. Twenty-six men lost their lives. Two versions of the explosion were circulated, one that it was the work of an Austrian spy, the second that there was treason in the Italian navy.

BOSTON-TWIN CITIES AIR LINE STARTS AUGUST 1

The Boston-Twin Cities Airline, the newly organized commercial air line for transporting passengers and special freight, will start in operate August 1 of this year, barring some unforseen delay, it was announced in New York city today by Colonel Harold E. Hartney, former commander of the First Pursuit Group of the American aviation forces in France and now vice-president of the General Airways System, sponsor of the project.

90 AUTOS BURNED IN $200,000 N. Y. BLAZE

New York, March 30.—Ninety automobiles were destroyed with a loss of more than $200,000 and yards of the Interboro Rapid Transit Company were threatened by a spectacular fire which razed a nearby garage early today. Interboro employes checked the flames until firemen arrived. In the railroad yards were hundreds of wooden "L" cars. The explosion of gasoline tanks of automobiles hampered firemen.

had passed to sea off the coast of Maine. Rain was falling from the Atlantic seaboard from Chesapeake bay to the Bay of Fundy. In Washington and Atlantic City snow was falling at 8 a. m. today.

WATER SUPPLY NOW FILLED.

Tuesday promises to be fair, with high Northwest winds. A low pressure area covering the entire Rocky Mountain region and central in Colorado, Wyoming and Montana promises to bring more rain to Boston later in the week.

Reservoirs conserving water for New England cities were full today for the time time since last November, and dry wells in the farm districts are once more filling up.

Two sections of Concord, N. H., were cut off from the main business section due to roads being under water. At Boscawen, eight miles above Concord on the Daniel Webster highway, fields were covered with three to four feet of water and the highway to a depth of two feet in the upper part of Boscawen.

The Boston & Maine Railroad today ordered track men to patrol sections of the main line between Concord and Manchester, where the tracks run along the river bank. Several minor highway washouts were reported to the State Highway Department and street car service was irregular due to lack of power caused by flood conditions at the company's dam No. 3, Franklin.

Coming so closely on the heels of the unseasonable thaw, the Valley districts are menaced by the worst flood in years.

The Merrimac, Connecticut, White, Contoocook, Salmon Falls, Androscoggin, and Kennebec were only a few of the rivers which were reported to be rising rapidly and threatening where damage had not been done already.

The roof of a three-story building in Manchester, N. H., collapsed under the weight of water. No one was hurt but the damage was estimated at $20,000.

Lightning played its part in the havoc. At Glen Cove, Rockland, Me., a bolt entered the power station, plunging five towns into darkness; another bolt struck the water tower of a mill at Union, N. H., crippling the plant.

Several highways in New England were made impassable by washouts and trains in several instances were delayed. One death when an automobile driver, whose vision was obscured by snow, ran down a man on a Providence, R. I., road.

Railroad tracks have been washed out at a number of places, paralyzing service in many sections. A score of bridges have been weakened and are in danger of being washed away, while whole communities have been cut off from the outside world by the raging waters.

While southern New England has been free of snow and ice for almost two months, the northern sections of Vermont and New Hampshire are still covered with several feet of snow.

The rainfall itself has amounted to more than two inches since Saturday morning when the first rainstorm broke.

The Boston & Maine Railroad has been hard hit by the floods, the damage to the roadbed amounting to many thousands of dollars.

At Manchester, N. H., the river is flowing seven feet over the dam while the Texas Island section is completely cut off by the floods. At Garvin's Falls the river is two feet higher than the highest point reached during the February floods, while at Nashua the river has risen eight feet in the last twenty-four hours and is still going up.

The ice has gone out of the Piscataquog River and the stream has overflowed its banks at many points.

Throughout the entire Merrimac valley the high waters have caused untold damage, and in many section families are fleeing to higher ground, fearful of their lives.

The waters from torrential rains and melting snow made wild things of both Dog River and the second branch of White River, both of which join the larger stream south of Randolph.

Dynamite was freely used to blast a flood channel through the N. N. Morse & Son's mill dam when the water threatened serious property damage as it swept through the gorge it cut beside the dam.

With the undermining of the river banks four barns, two buildings of the Sargent, Osgood & Roundy factory, together with the dam which provided the power, slipped into the stream. The company lost much in stock.

given never seen him. He has none of my letters and is certainly not authorized to bring any legal action in any name," the "very close friend" says Miss Meredith added.

Miss Meredith is said to have known Dennistoun during the period after his first wife divorced him and before his marriage to the Dowager Countess Carnarvon.

The actress denied all callers today at her apartment. She has refused to disclose the names of her lawyers. Much of her time in recent years has been spent abroad.

FOUR KINDS OF DRESS FOR RICH GIRL

Edith Gould Tells How Her Mother Took Them to Paris for Clothes Every Year

By Edith Gould Wainwright
CHAPTER VII.

In my last article I told about the clothes of my mother, the late Mrs. George J. Gould, how she believed that it was every woman's duty to make the best of her looks and how she herself practiced that belief. Today I will speak of how she picked out our dresses and also of her jewel collection which was one of the most famous in America.

Up to 1914, when the World War began in Europe, mamma got all our things at a French dressmaking establishment in the Rue de la Paix, Paris, that specialized in children's clothes. We went abroad every Summer and the annual pilgrimage to Paris became an eagerly anticipated event in the family.

We had four different kinds of dresses. One was for play, one for school, one for afternoon at home and the last and most elaborate for dancing class and children's parties. Naturally, after 1914 we did not go abroad any more and mamma took us to a famous couturier in West Fifty-seventh street, where she bought her own things as well as ours.

Sisters Dressed Alike

She would never send us with a governess or nurse to buy new apparel, but always accompanied us and consulted with the head lady as to which dresses became us best. She never tired of sitting for hours watching us try on clothes, and as for being fitted herself she had superhuman patience.

Although Gloria, my youngest sister, is four years my junior, mamma always dressed us alike. She thought the similarity made us look much smarter. When we were very young, George, who is nearly six years older than I, had to wear a sailor suit when we wore such a costume. George liked the sailor suit because the long trousers gave him a grown-up feeling. Mamma thought sailor suits ideal for children's playtime, blue serge in Winter and white duck in Summer.

Detested Tryons

Gloria was always much interested in what she wore and would stand without complaint for what seemed to me interminable periods while clothes were being fitted. Very different from me! I simply detested those tryons, and my mother often became greatly annoyed because I failed to show what she considered a proper interest.

I would stand first on one foot and then on another, fidgeting and thinking of everything save the engrossing topic of the moment. Day dreams of bicycling or fishing or gardening, the latter being my favorite hobby to this day, would go through my mind while the conversation concerned itself with laces and ribbons and blouses.

Of course it was in town that we wore most of our pretty things. Even when we lived at Georgian Court, and before we spent the Winter months at No. 857 Fifth avenue, mamma had us come into the city to attend a private dancing class that Mrs. Clarence Mackay, now Mrs. Joseph Blake, held once a week at her house.

Gorgeous Gems

It was in New York also that my mother wore most of her beautiful jewels. When I was a little girl I would look on her with awe as she was prepared to attend the opera with her diamond dog collar around her neck and her pearl and diamond tiara upon her head.

The front of her dress was completely hidden by a corsage of emeralds, each stone large enough for a solitaire ring. Besides the dog collar her neck was encircled by strings of pearls, one of which hung down below her knees. On her fingers were her famous diamond rings.

In later years simplicity became the keynote of fashionable dress and women discontinued wearing so much jewelry. Tiaras and dog collars have become antiquated and today you rarely see these ornaments, even at the opera.

Mamma, always one jump ahead of the fashion, was the first to discard these things, and latterly wore only one short string of pearls and one small ring. She gave a great many of the smaller pieces of her jewelry to her daughters, but most of her collection of gems was kept in a vault and no longer was a detective required to accompany her to the opera to safeguard her precious stones. In her will she ordered her beautiful jewelry sold and the proceeds placed in a trust fund for her children. So now this marvelous collection has been broken up and scattered over many different countries.

Collected for Years

Years and years were spent in the accumulation of these pearls, diamonds and emeralds. Papa took great delight in presenting such gifts to my mother, and in their travels about Europe he would spend much time in examining jewelers' wares. The strings of pearls were made up only after a great deal of care in matching the gems, which came from among the treasures of various collectors.

In the next chapter I will write about my elder sisters, Marjorie and Vivien.

Martha Lee wants everybody who can sing, dance, or whistle not to keep their talent hidden under a bushel, but to write in and be put on the list of entertainers, so that there may be home club talent on the program as well as professional!

4-R TO GIVE MUSIC.

The Boston American 4-R Receiver set will also be on hand to dispense concerts solos and jazz so that the party will be a regular wholesome affair with so much to do, and see, and listen to, that it's going to be the best birthday party you ever attended!

But listen to this—the unique part of the whole affair is that there are going to be two parties instead of one—so many guests are expected!

The dates set for the twin celebration are Tuesday, April 7, and Friday, April 10. Only 650 guests can be accomodated at each time—so write in early to Martha Lee and apply for your guest ticket.

It goes without saying that Miss Lee and Miss Jean Sargent of the Shepard Stores will be there to receive the guests so that if you never have met these charming hostesses—whom you hear every morning over the radio—this will be the opportunity to greet them in person!

17,000 MEMBERS IN YEAR.

Vauclain to Pay $10,000 If He Takes Drink

Philadelphia, March 30.—A legal agreement with a $10,000 forfeit for violation binds Samuel M. Vauclain, president of the Baldwin Locomotive Works, to strict observance of the Volstead act while in this country.

Mr. Vauclain signed the agreement with the late W. A. Garrett, A. S. Goble and R. A. Hoy, Baldwin officials on May 18, 1924, the others agreeing to forfeit $1,000 each if they violated it.

The agreement, it was said, cites the desire of the signers to obey the laws.

BEATS MAN WHO OFFERED $1000 FOR HIS WIFE

attempt to kill Goon Him, Chinese laundry, of No. 245 Western avenue, Lynn, on Sunday, declared in the Lynn Court today that he struck the Chinese because he offered to buy his twenty-three-year-old wife, Florence, from him for $1,000.

The Chinese, his head in bandages, admitted having made the offer but told the court it was made in a spirit of fun two weeks ago when Richards and his wife were in his laundry.

Richards at that time, Goon said, jokingly told him he would sell him his wife for $2,000. Goon said that he told Richards $1,000 was all he had.

Four stitches were taken in the cut on Goon's head, his wrist also being sprained by a blow from the rock. Richard's case was continued until tomorrow.

Quake in Panama Causes Panic at Ball Game

Balboa, Canal Zone, March 30.—The severest earthquake shock felt here since 1913 caused a panic at a baseball game where a large crowd had gathered.

No injuries are reported, and the property damage was slight.

It is believed the epicentre of disturbance was about 150 miles north of Balboa.

COOLIDGES RETURN AFTER STORMY TRIP

Washington, March 30 (I.N.S.).—The President and Mrs. Coolidge and a small party of friends returned to the White House this morning at 9 o'clock following an extended week-end cruise in Chesapeake Bay aboard the Mayflower.

For the greater part of the trip, which started Friday afternoon, the Presidential yacht bucked a half gale that swept the Atlantic seaboard for forty-eight hours.

OFFERS REWARD OF $500 FOR GEM BANDIT

A reward of $500 was today announced by Harry J. Murray of the Harry J. Murray Detective Service, Inc., No. 31 Milk street, for information leading to the arrest and conviction of the bandit who robbed the John J. Kingsley Company of $10,000 worth of jewels.

Mr. Murray stated he had checked up on certain men who were in the store at the time and had found them to be reputable citizens, engaged in making legitimate purchases.

This was only the second time in thirty years that the Kingsley Company has been victimized by criminals. The last was engineered by the notorious "Christmas" Keogh, who purchased thousands of dollars worth of jewelry with bad checks.

An Ontario mining engineer, was arrested for this crime, and after being acquitted, brought suit against a detective agency and recovered damages.

Keogh was arrested through the efforts of Murray and made a settlement with the jewelry firm, one of the few times in the history of the detective that a criminal has taken such a step.

R. I. PROBE OF PHONE RATE BOOST, APRIL 10

Providence, March 30.—The public Utilities Commission will begin its investigation into the proposed rate increase of the New England Telephone & Telegraph Company on April 10, in the State House here. This was decided today at a meeting of the commission. The taking of testimony will probably begin April 15. It is expected that it will take the company until May 1 to present its case.

SLAYER SMILES AS HE GOES TO CHAIR

Bellefonte, Pa., March 30 (I.N.S.).—"Pistol Pete" Henry Jackson, alias J. C. Taylor, convicted killer of Policeman Daniel Conley at Pittsburgh, went to the electric chair with a smile on his face today. He was pronounced dead after two electric shocks.

2 SPANISH BISHOPS CREATED CARDINALS

Rome, March 30 (A.P.).—At a secret consistory held by Pope Pius today Monsignor Vicente Casanova Y Marzol, archbishop of Granada, and Monsignor Bundain Y Esteban, archbishop of Seville, were created cardinals.

150,000 MINERS WILL OBSERVE 8-HOUR DAY

Hazleton, Pa., March 30.—The 155,000 miners of the anthracite coal field will be idle Wednesday, the anniversary of the inauguration of the eight-hour day. Under proclamations issued by their district officers only hoisting engineers, firemen, pump runners and watchmen will remain on duty.

Formerly mass meetings took place at which leaders were the speakers and at one time parades were a feature, but these practices have gradually died out and the men, for the most part, simply abstain from their day's toil.

PATROLMAN ON TRIAL FOR ACCEPTING BRIBE

Patrolman Achille Florene of the Dudley street station went on trial at police headquarters today charged with having accepted "protection" money from a Roxbury barber who was accused of selling liquor.

According to the charges, Joseph Fulino paid $5 to $10 a week to Florene, and then sold his shop to Philip D. Farri. Farri paid one week's protection, it is said, and the matter then came to the attention of the authorities.

POLICEMAN IDENTIFIES CHAPMAN AS SLAYER

man that attracted your attention?
A.—His high cheek bones.
Q.—Did you have your gun in your hand? A.—I did.
Q.—And did you shoot? A.—No, I did not.
Q.—Are you sure of that? A.—I am.
Q.—Was the reason you did not shoot because you were lying flat on your stomach behind the counter? A.—No.
Q.—Where were you? A.—On one knee. I had not pulled my gun when I entered the store and drew it then.
Q.—Were you afraid? A.—No.

HOW SKELLY WAS SHOT.

Q.—And you did not stand up and fire when the man ran out of the store? A.—No.
Q.—And so poor Skelly got shot while you were crouched inactive behind the counter? A.—Yes.
Q.—What were you waiting for? A.—I thought he might bolt out the back door.
Q.—Did you consider you performed good police duty that day? A.—The best I could do under the circumstances.
Q.—Did you hear McCue say Skelly accused Shean of the crime? A.—I did.
Q.—And did you at any time attempt to lift your voice and correct that in court or elsewhere and give the version you did today when you shook your finger at this man? A.—No.
Q.—Why not? A.—Because the defence never asked me.
Q.—What do you mean by that? A.—I told what I knew to Sergeant McCue.
Q.—Did you make the report on this case? A.—I did.
Q.—When? A.—Two days later.
Q.—And you waited two days before making your report, although poor Skelly died at 10 o'clock that morning? A.—Yes.
Q.—Didn't you tell persons on your beat that you could not identify the man who shot Skelly? A.—No.
Q.—Didn't you tell a storekeeper that you could not? A.—Yes, to get rid of him.

IDENTIFIES CHAPMAN.

Stanley Heller, surprise witness for the State, also positively identified Chapman as the man who ran out of the department store with a shining revolver in his hand.

"My wife and I were living in a furnished room in New Britain at the time," said Heller. "We got up early that Sunday morning. My wife was going to Boston. On the way to the railroad station we passed Davidson & Leventhal's store at exactly 7:22 o'clock. Just as we arrived we saw an automobile pull up full of policemen. They ran down the alleyway. A fellow named Johnson said a fellow had run up the street.

"There was excitement like a stage scene. A fellow came rushing out the front door. He had a nickel-plated revolver in his hand. I cannot recall which hand. He came close to me and stared at me and I turned as if on a pivot and he kept staring at me. The he ran up the street."

Q.—Who was that man? A.—That's him sitting there (pointing at Chapman who rose from his chair).

Under cross-examination by Judge Grosbi, Heller employed as a mechanic, admitted that he eloped with a 17-year-old girl and directed her to give her wrong age in applying for the marriage license.

Q.—"Oh then you were guilty of subordination of perjury? A.—I was, because thought so much of her. She was the first woman I ever loved."

Heller said he heard one shot only. He said Chapman did not make a racket coming through the store door.

Cop Picks Chapman as Skelly Slayer

FIRST direct evidence that Gerald Chapman, million-dollar mail bandit, killed Patrolman James Skelly during a robbery of a New Britain, Ct., store, was given today at the Chapman trial by Officer Alfred E. Atwater, State's star witness, and the slain officer's comrade.

Atwater, first to enter the burglarized shop, said:

"We went down the alleyway and as I entered the store that man there (pointing at Chapman) drew his gun and fired three shots at Skelly, which killed him."

"Did the accused say anything to you when he raised his gun?"

"Yes, he said: 'Get back or I'll kill you.'"

Fog Holds Steamer Camden Over Week-End

Bangor, Me., March 30.—Heavy weather off the coast held the steamer Camden, which left here Saturday for Boston, in Rockland harbor over the week-end.

The Camden will clear from Rockland tonight, leaving Boston Tuesday night on her return to Penobscot Bay and river ports.

Q.—Why not? A.—Because the door seemed well oiled.

WAS LOOKING AT RINGS.

Q.—Oh, you even noticed that the door was oiled did you? A.—Well that is my business to notice things like that.

Q.—And where was your wife all this time? A.—With me.

Q.—Is she in court? A.—No.

Q.—Where was she when the shoot ing occurred? A.—Looking at a lot of rings in the show window.

Patrolman Clarence Lamphier, who drove the squad of officers to the department store, testified that he heard three shots and caught Skelly as the latter fell.

Lamphier admitted someone shouted, "There goes one of them," and Officers Liebler and Malone pursued the man, who proved to be Shean.

CONTRADICTS TESTIMONY.

Patrolman Walter Malone contradicted Patrolman Liebler concerning Johnson, the hostler, who has been summoned by the defence to testify that the fellow with Shean seen fleeing from the looted store was not Chapman, but George Stuyvesant, a professional crook and long a pal of Shean's, whom Johnson later identified in a lineup in New York.

First mention of the name of Shean as Patrolman Skelley's slayer was made during earlier testimony today.

Judge Grosbi, counsel for Chapman, asked Patrolman Liebler if he had ever heard Shean charged with the Skelly murder. The witness replied in the negative.

"Didn't you hear Detective Sergeant McCue say that Skelly, in a dying statement, had pointed out Shean in the operating room at New Britain Hospital and said, 'He is the man who shot me.'"

"Yes, I did hear something like that."

Q.—No doubt about it, is there? A.—No.

Q.—Then what did you mean by saying just now that you had never heard Shean charged with the murder? A.—Because I heard many things. I did not know what you referred to.

Q.—How long have you been on the New Britain police force? A.—Since 1917.

Q.—And you know Henry Johnson and heard his story? A.—What Johnson? There are a lot of Johnsons.

Q.—Oh, you know the Johnson I refer to now, don't you. A.—No.

Q.—Don't you know the Henry Johnson, the hostler employed in a stable near Davidson & Leventhal's store? A.—Yes.

Speculation was keen today as to whether "Mrs. Beeswax," the mysterious woman friend of Chapman in Providence, would be introduced as a surprise alibi witness for the defense. This woman, recently a bride, is reported to have come to Chapman's aid more than once and to have been ever ready to offer advice and solace.

It was rumored that Chapman regards her so highly that he would forego whatever aid she has offered as he does not want her to jeopardize her family life or face odium at his trial.

The defence promised a new development in the case—one that will prove a big aid in clearing Chapman of the charge against him.

This announcement declared that Samuel Meisel, proprietor of a hotel at Crested Lake, New Troy, N. Y., is ready to testify that George Stuyvesant, identified at one time as Chapman, himself, was working at the hotel on the night of the murder.

Stuyvesant was to be one of the trump cards of the defense in attempting to prove that some one other than Chapman had the opportunity to slay the policeman.

GETS YEAR FOR TRYING TO AID JAIL BREAK

Salem, March 30.—Edmund Gould of Lynn, who came here Saturday night to smuggle saws through to inmates of the House of Correction, is an inmate himself today.

Pleading guilty in District Court to the charge of trying to aid prisoners to escape, he was sentenced to the House of Correction for a year. Gould was discharged from the House of Correction on March 8. He had served four months for appropriating another's automobile.

When the sheriff found him, Saturday night, he was outside the jail, trying to tie a box of saws to a string dangling from a second tier window.

PACIFIC FLIGHT SPURS ARMY-NAVY EXPERTS

Washington, March 30 (I.N.S.).—An epochal race is in prospect this Summer between the army and navy air forces for the honor of first spanning the Pacific.

The branch which first completes a ship and starts the 2,839-mile flight from San Francisco to Hawaii will, in all probability, win, judging from past performances of modern aircraft, and for that reason a friendly construction race is now on.

At McCook Field, Dayton, O., several types of ships capable of making such an extended flight are being tested.

SPECIAL "WING FLAPS" FOR BIG AIR EXPRESSES

London, March 30.—New giant air expresses now being built for the Imperial Airways to ply between London and the continent will have specially designed "wing flaps" which can be raised or lowered from the pilot's seat.

When the flaps are lowered the machine can get off the ground with a heavy load and alight at a very low speed, while with the flaps raised and the machine in the air, head resistance is lowered and the machine becomes capable of high speed.

were held to be employes of the leaders in the conspiracy.

No appeals from the sentences of Rickard and Mums will be taken, Merritt Lane and Walter Van Riper, their counsels, said. Appeals of the other sentences also are not expected, it was indicated.

Judge Bodine referred to the sentencing as the "last act of a drama enacted four years ago." He said he was faced with a fine point in fixing sentence.

"In this case who can say to what extent the government was injured?" he asked. "In the States where the films were shown prize fights were legal, newspapers and the radio carried full accounts of them, and movies taken within the States can be shown. Nevertheless a Federal law was flouted and punishment must be meted out."

MAN TAKEN BY TEAR GAS HELD AS THIEF IN $21,000

William Burke, 21, of No. 25 Heath street, Dorchester, who was arrested in the store of the Fidelity Drug Company, No. 604 Dudley street, Roxbury, after police made him harmless by throwing tear gas bombs into the place, was charged with breaking and entering in the night time and carrying concealed weapons and held in $21,000 when arraigned in Roxbury Court today.

Burke held more than a dozen policemen at bay with a pistol until the gas bombs were used.

C., March 30.—After writing in Latin as his own epitaph, "Whom the gods would destroy they first make mad," Professor Hugh Morson, 75, committed suicide by cutting his throat at the State Hospital for the Insane. For nearly a half-century Mr. Morson was connected with the Raleigh public school system. He was sent to the hospital ten days ago because of recurring attacks of melancholia.

LA BELLE CHOCOLATIERE

I have been talking pretty regularly over the Radio lately about cocoa and chocolate as you have probably noticed, and the reason is that these products have been fixed very firmly in my mind through a trip I recently took through the Walter Baker Chocolate Mill at Milton. I do wish that every one of you could have gone with me through this most interesting plant, because then every time you use cocoa or chocolate you would think of the many interesting steps that are taken in changing the cocoa bean into the delicious Baker's Sweet Chocolate, Breakfast Cocoa or Cooking Chocolate which most of us have been familiar with from the time we used to stand on our tip-toes to scrape out mother's cake dish.

I spoke last week of the valuable help so many of the large food manufacturers are to the housewife through the beautiful literature they furnish free so gladly. I want to make special mention of the Walter Baker Company's book of Chocolate and Cocoa Recipes. This book contains some of the finest recipes for beverages, candies, puddings, cakes, frostings and pastries that I have ever seen, and the beautiful pictures in colors of the finished dainties will fairly make your mouth water. The recipes were prepared by some of our most celebrated cooks and you can try any one of them safe in the knowledge that if directions are followed your cooking will be a complete success. This means a good deal, doesn't it? because is anything more discouraging than to waste time and good materials in trying attractive sounding recipes which often result in dismal and expensive failures?

Through the courtesy of the Walter Baker Company I can send a copy of this most attractive and valuable cooking book to members of the WNAC American Women's Club without charge and I know that every one of you who have not this book already in your files will be anxious to secure it. The courtesy of a stamp for postage will of course be appreciated.

A FRIEND IN DEED

No doubt you have often heard me refer in my daily Radio chats to "cooking oil." Of course, I can not give trade names over the Radio, but I have always had in mind, in these recipes, Mazola Cooking Oil, which can be used so economically for deep fat frying, for sauteing, for shortening and for salad dressing. No doubt you know that one of Mazola's great virtues is that it does not carry the flavor from one food to another. For instance frying potatoes, fish cakes, onions and doughnuts all in the same fat and having the fat sweet and uncontaminated by strong flavors at the end of the performance!

I hope that you all tried the Mazola Three Minute Mayonnaise recipe that appeared on this page last week. It truly makes one of the finest salad dressings that I know of, and you will find that many people who will not touch olive oil dressing will fairly gourmandize on the Mazola mayonnaise. There is only space today to just suggest a few of the ways you can use this pure, economical cooking fat, but I will be very happy to send you a delightful book of Mazola recipes, prepared under the direction of the world famous Oscar of the Waldorf-Astoria, if you will drop me a line. Try Mazola for shortening in your bread (either white, wholewheat, brown or corn), in rolls and muffins too, popovers and biscuits. It makes a short cake that will melt in your mouth and delicious soft ginger-bread, pancakes and waffles.

You will like it for cake making, too, if you hate to cream butter and sugar as much as I do, and it cuts down the overhead in cookies considerably. Mazola pierrot is a time and money saver and there is an endless number of delicious puddings and pudding sauces it can be used in. Foods deep fat fried in Mazola are readily digested, and Mazola in baked beans will give a new and delicious flavor to an old friend. I only wish I had time to tell you of all the delicious salads that I have made with this excellent cooking oil. It comes in pint, quart, half-gallon and gallon tins and if you are not already a Mazola booster as I am, I know that after one trial you will thank me for pointing the way to the acquaintance of a delightful mutual friend.

A TEA TREAT

May I treat you to a cup of delicious tea? I have been fortunate enough to be able to secure for members of the WNAC American Women's Club a large number of samples of a most delicious tea—Tetley's Orange Pekoe and I know you will be glad to get acquainted with it. Each ample package contains enough tea for about ten cups and after you have finished the tenth cup I'm sure you will be as enthusiastic about this excellent brand as I am—that is, if you will make your tea according to the directions that come with every package. First, rinse out your teapot with boiling water; second, put one teaspoonful of tea in pot for each cup of tea; third, pour fresh boiled bubbling water on the tea leaves; fourth, steep for five or six minutes and serve promptly; fifth, always serve with milk or cream.

Right now they are having a very interesting demonstration of Tetley's tea at Houghton Dutton Company's and you will be especially pleased with the tea caddy in which this delightful tea is packed. It is a very artistic caddy that you will be proud to have on your shelf, and instead of the usual round opening, the Tetley Tea Caddy has an oval cover and the opening is plenty large enough for the housewife to slip her hand down into the caddy, taking out as much tea as she wishes. There is no additional charge for this really handsome caddy in spite of the fact that they are expensive little articles to purchase in the shops. The tea is just $1.09 a pound and as each pound will make 300 cups you see your Tetley's tea will actually cost you one-third of a cent a cup or three cups for one cent. Surely surprisingly reasonable for an orange pekoe tea that is of such superior quality that it is the only nationally advertised tea that is allowed to put "Orange Pekoe" on its labels. First come will be first served on the tea samples, and although I have a good supply on hand, I am sure that there are many hundreds of our members who will want to enjoy this tea treat. So better drop me a line promptly for your sample. Of course, I will appreciate it if you care to enclose a two cent stamp for postage.

THE JUNKET FOLKS
Little Falls, N. Y.

FOR INFANTS, INVALIDS AND WELL FOLKS

I wonder if you are one of the people to whom the word Junket seems to mean an almost painfully plain dessert, suitable chiefly for infants and invalids? I'll admit that this is the way I used to think of Junket until I became better acquainted with this wholesome product and the endless number of delicious ways in which it can be used. I hope many of you tried the recipe for Raspberry Delight which appeared on this page a week ago today. A few of the many other delightful Junket combinations are Vanilla Junket with Peaches and Cream, or fresh berries, Orange Junket with Walnuts and Fig Newtons, Junket a la Melba, Chocolate Junket with Maraschino Cherries, Lemon Junket with Sliced Bananas, Junket Fruit Souffle and Orange Junket with Macaroons and Nuts. Junket Rice Pudding, Coffee Junket with Puffed Rice, Orange Prune Whip, Vanilla Junket with Banana, Orange Junket in Cantaloupes, Junket with Pineapple Sauce, with Chocolate Sauce, with Apple Whip, Lemon Junket Tarts, Frozen Junket, Chocolate Junket Ice Cream and Junket Orange Sherbet.

Then Junket is such a friend in an emergency—when husband brings home the unexpected guest or when the dear in-laws drop in unheralded and unsung. You can make such tempting dishes in a jiffy if there is always a package of Junket powder on hand. Here are some delicious Junket combinations:

Raspberry Junket with Whipped Cream—Nut Bread Sandwiches; Orange Junket—Green Frosted Cookies.

Chocolate Junket with Marshmallows in Fruit Jar—Ambrosia; Vanilla Junket with Chopped Nuts—Cinnamon Toast; Lemon Junket with Raspberry Tinted Whipped Cream—Angel Food. Coffee Junket with Marshmallow Whip—Nabisco Wafers.

And, of course, we mustn't forget that while all these delicious things can be made for the well folks, Junket is also the foundation of many delicious and nourishing invalid dishes and makes an ideal baby food, being used extensively in infants' hospitals and by many children's specialists. I will be glad to send you recipes for any of the Junket dishes I have named that may interest you and hope that you will always have at least one or two packages of this inexpensive and delicious food product on your pantry shelves.

Radio Signal Sent Underground to West Coast

Hyattsville, Md., March 30.—After tests carried on for two months, Dr. James Harris Rogers announced that he succeeded in broadcasting as far as the Pacific Coast, or a distance of about 2,000 miles, with his underground radio transmitting set.

He received a telegram from W. J. Nutt of signal station WCZ, Los Angeles, saying the signals "were coming in finely."

FIRST HEARING TOMORROW ON TRAFFIC LOOP

Boston Business Men Unite to Seek Relief From Ruinous Street Congestion

Boston real estate and business men are expected to attend in large numbers the first public meeting in the Gardner Auditorium at the State House tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock to discuss the proposed loop highway and Dock square improvements.

The organizations which are petitioning the Legislature to authorize the projects include the Boston Chamber of Commerce, Retail Trade Board, Boston Real Estate Exchange, Massachusetts Real Estate Exchange, Boston Fruit and Produce Exchange, Teams Owners' Association, Boston Motor Truck Club and the Boston Society of Landscape Architects.

DELAY IS COSTLY.

The Loop Highway would divert traffic around the present crowded districts and would connect with streets leading to and from these districts. The Dock Square Improvement would open up the Faneuil Hall district and eliminate congestion in the market district.

At present traffic going through the city or going to a destination in the retail wholesale office and financial or market districts must follow narrow and crowded streets that are hopelessly inadequate. Large numbers of trucks and teams pass through these districts to destinations beyond and crowd out vehicles seeking destinations in the districts.

The organizations back of the project assert that each year's delay in putting them through means $1,000,000 added to their eventual cost.

The proposed improvements are being supported also by the special commission on the intermediate thoroughfare, created by the 1924 Legislature, the Boston City Planning Board and the Mayor's advisory committee on public improvements.

REMEDIES NEEDED.

Business men who have studied traffic problems in Boston for years say that the city is being slowly strangled by the congestion in down town streets. Congested streets mean delays and business losses that total millions of dollars each year, they say.

An analysis of traffic congestion shows that a remedy is needed in six important directions:

1—Relief of congestion in the retail store district.

2—Relief of congestion in the office and financial district.

3—Relief of congestion in the market district.

4—An adequate approach to the Charles River dam from the business district.

5—A better connection of Stuart street with the business district.

6—A better trucking road between the North and South stations.

Effects any more than is necessary

A general survey of the entire situation, coupled with the more intimate analysis of definite requirements, has convinced planning authorities that relief can best be provided by a route which would divert traffic around the congested area rather than through it. By such a route it would not be necessary for traffic to traverse the streets of the retail or office and financial district for them to reach their destinations in these districts from the new thoroughfare. Through traffic would use this new route to a considerable extent, and thereby be eliminated from the congested district.

The proposed Loop Highway is designed to accomplish this purpose. At the southern end it connects with Kneeland street (now being widened) and Stuart street, and also with Albany street and Broadway. At the northern end it connects with Charles River Dam, and from that point it provides easy access, through Green street to Scollay square, Washington, Milk, Franklin and Summer streets. From both ends access is provided to Atlantic avenue and its various wharves by numerous short, connecting streets, at the same time affording connections between the North and South Stations and their freight yards, through Northern avenue, Federal and Kingston streets at the south, and Beverly, Canal, Friend, Portland and Lowell streets at the north.

The relief of the lower market district is provided for by cutting down the long blocks between Commercial street and Atlantic avenue and providing direct access to the lower market without the need of using Commercial street, also giving outlets from Commercial street and Cross street on the new route, leaving Blackstone street available for the upper market traffic.

The relief of the congested retail district in the vicinity of Washington and Tremont streets is afforded by leading downtown traffic around this district, rather than through it, as is compulsory under present conditions.

The line of the new highway would avoid high-priced land values, thereby making it cheaper to construct.

The organizations back of the projects say:

"The loop highway would cost $27,000,000, and the Dock Square improvements would amount to $2,000,000. Over 30 per cent of that cost represents land damages, the remainder is for actual construction of the street.

It is proposed to borrow money to pay this cost by issuing twenty-four serial bonds.

SAYS CRIMINAL IS REFLEX OF 'SOCIETY'

Dr. Orlando E. Miller, president of the International Society of Applied Psychology, who is delivering lectures at Symphony Hall at 7:45 o'clock on "The Fine Art of Living," says that so-called crime is an economic condition.

"Study of history," says Miller, "will reveal that this criminal reaction never extends to the actual taking of life in any country, except during a period of from five to fifteen years following wars. The psychology of this is very simple to understand.

"When organized society will draft large numbers of its younger members into armies and deliberately teach them to kill, it should never expect anything else than that this cheapening of life will remain in their blood for some years to come.

"No man is naturally a criminal; he is simply a reflex of the society in which he has been raised, and instead of punishing the individuals, a really Christian civilization would pass upon his conduct for the one specific purpose of correcting his defects, and making of him, through kindly educational methods, a better citizen."

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets do that which calomel does, and just as effectively, but their action is gentle and safe, instead of severe and irritating.

No one who takes Olive Tablets is ever cursed with a "dark brown taste," a bad breath, a dull, listless, "no good" feeling, constipation, torpid liver, bad disposition or pimply face.

Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil; you will know them by their olive color.

Dr. Edwards spent years among patients afflicted with liver and bowel complaints and Olive Tablets are the immensely effective result. Take one or two nightly for a week. See how much better you feel and look. 15c and 30c.

KID'S PARENTS OFFER BRIDE $100,000

Negotiations on to Prevent the Romance of Rich Youth Reaching Public Trial

New York, March 30 (Universal Service).—The marital troubles of the Leonard Kip Rhinelanders may never be aired in court. Instead of taking the facts before a jury, as had been intimated, both sides are expected to prevent a trial.

Rumors have it that counsel for young Rhinelander and for his bride have considered proposals for a settlement.

The wealthy and aristocratic family of the bridegroom have offered $100,000 for the prevention of a trial, being unwilling to satisfy the curious public counsel for the bride, who is being sued for annulment on the ground that she deceived her husband as to her race, intimated that $100,000 is entirely too small an amount to consider.

Out in all sorts of weather

Meant coughs for Mr. Brooks, but REM got rid of them all right

A market teamster can't limit his trips to pleasant days—he's out in all sorts of weather—has to take it as it comes.

No wonder, then, that Mr. John J. Brooks, of 94 Allston St., Lawrence, Mass., often got coughs and colds that way. Last winter he had such a bad one it had him guessing how to get rid of it.

But he did get rid of it! Here's how:

"I often get coughs during wet or cold weather," says Mr. Brooks, "for I'm out in all sorts of weather. Last winter I had a fierce one, was all choked up, like with asthma. I guess I tried everything under the sun for it, but got no better.

"Then I thought I'd try a bottle of REM, for I saw one ad where a motorman, and another where a traffic cop recommended it.

"It did the work all right! It was the quickest-acting cough medicine I ever saw. It broke the cough right up."

So many who have tried REM speak of the quick relief it brings.

This quick action is largely due to a special ingredient—effective, harmless—not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM quickly begins its work of quieting your cough.

No Opiates in REM. And pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the blue package with the round orange label. If it doesn't help you, you can have your money back. Fair enough!

Horse Show Voted Largest and Most Brilliant Ever by the Throng of Fashionables in Attendance Saturday Night

Betty Alden

SEATED society, from its advantage point in the New Riding Club's galleries on Saturday, greeted society in the saddle with round after round of hearty applause as blue-ribboners of Fashiondom put blue-ribboners from the realm of horseflesh through their paces or over the jumps.

EVERYONE AGREED that the Horse Show was the most brilliant and largest—both as regards representative horses from famous stables and their well known riders—that the New Riding Club has staged in all its career. To Reginald Bird, as prime instigator, and to Robert Almy, Elmer Jared Bliss, Jr., and William H. Rand, Jr., his associates, go the congratulations.

PROBABLY IN THE WHOLE Smart Set there is no more popular a girl than Miss Rosamond Adie, daughter of the Andrew Adies of Chestnut Hill, and fiancee of Robert Almy. She and her famous horse, "Melody," carried off several ribbons and trophies, much to the delight of the spectators.

MISS MARY LOUISE ALMY, dark-eyed, vivacious daughter in the William Almy family, a debutante of the past Winter and as skilled a horsewoman as may be found in several counties, was also several times a winner, first with her horse "Rempstone," and then with "Rose of Killarney."

SHE IS A SISTER of Robert Almy, and will be in the bridal entourage for the Adie-Almy wedding when that important ceremonial of the impending Spring is solemnized in the Church of the Redeemer on April 25. The romance dates back, so they say, to childhood days, and will unite two families prominent in both the worlds of fashion and sport.

MISS PEGGY PORTER, that blithe belle who is always the centre of an admiring masculine group whenever she stirs abroad, was an enthusiastic onlooker. Miss Porter, daughter of the Dr. Charles Allen Porters of Beacon street, is an intimate of Miss Adie, and she, too, will be seen as one of the attending bridesmaids.

THE WILLIAM STUART FORBES family, pere et mere, and the daughter, Miss Barbara Forbes, made up an interesting group in the galleries. Mr. Forbes had his horse, "Sir Barton Byng," entered and put him over the hurdles in the spirited "Touch and Go" class.

NEAR THE FORBESES I saw Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer, a keenly interested spectator and specially on the qui vive when her daughter, Miss Theodora Ayer, appeared in the ring atop her handsome gray, "Silver Birch." Miss Ayer is perfectly at home in the saddle, as is also her charming and youthful mother.

THEY ARE LEADERS in the North Shore coterie that rides to hounds of the Myopia pack, and entertain brilliantly all through the Summer and Autumn seasons, when life in the Myopia section is really just one hunt after another. Mrs. Ayer is hostess every Thanksgiving morning for a hunt breakfast, always a merry rendezvous for the riders in their "pinks."

(Photograph by Bachrach.)

MRS. WALTER M. PRATT lends the prestige of her name to the patroness list for the Military Ball at the Somerset on April 17, which shines resplendent in the late season's more frivolous affairs.

I ALSO SAW IN the gathering at the Riding Club that interesting young matron, Mrs. Moorfield Paterson. She was smartly turned out in an ensemble of the navy blue on which Paris put at the moment smiles so fondly as the mode for madame. Mrs. Patterson and Mr. Patterson are shining lights of the Senior Supper Dance set, and have set up their Boston establishment on Beacon Hill while he is taking a course of study here.

ANOTHER OF the young girl riders, Miss Elizabeth Stewart, who a spirited figure on the tanbark at the New Riding Club. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Stewart of Beacon street, who staged a novel and still-talked-about evening out for her aboard the steamship Samaria at her dock between voyages.

MR. STEWART is the New England representative of the line which includes the Samaria in its trans-Atlantic fleet. All the buds of that Winter and the one before last, danced blithely about the walled-in decks and in the lounge and palm rooms, and voted the affair a delightful innovation in the Winter's program.

MRS. STEWART belongs to the Plesants family, distinguished in the aristocracy of both Baltimore and the State of Maryland. True to tradition and in accordance with time-honored custom, Miss Stewart went down to Baltimore to make her debut there at the brilliant and exclusive "Bachelors" Cotillion, just as her mother had done before her.

"GO TO GILBERTS." Mrs. Richard C. Curtis, Mrs. Samuel Eliot and Mrs. William Endicott are telling their friends. "Open your purses generously" they also argue, and thus help a most worthy cause, the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary. For on the first three days of the month of every cash purchase made at Gilbert's 20 per cent. goes to the Infirmary.

MRS. CURTIS is this season the one responsible for this ambitious effort. She has a coterie of youthful smart set matrons assisting, both behind the counters and with suggestions to intending purchasers. Mrs. Harold Peabody, Mrs. Richard C. Paine, Mrs. Louis Curtis, George H. Lyman, Jr., are a few, and of the girls there are Miss Frances Weld and Miss Theresa Merriam.

THIS IS, I BELIEVE, the third Spring that Mr. Gilbert has so generously aided a local charity. The shop is in the Park Square Building, and will make a lively rendezvous for Madame, while she replenishes the shelves of town house or orders delectables for the country or shore home.

MISS GRACE NICHOLS is the moving spirit of today's most appealing affair, the appearance at the Fine Arts Theatre of a troupe of Japanese players who are helping to raise funds for Tsuda College in Tokio.

A BAND OF ORIENTAL players is being brought to town, largely through the efforts of Miss Nichols (who has lived much in Japan) and her confreres here who are all vastly interested in the fortunes of the college.

THREE PLAYS, the "Melon Thief," "Spring Water" and "The Princess Radiant," are on the program, and aside from the imported players, students from various institutions of learning have places in the casts.

A GROUP of debutantes all in authentic Japanese costumes, and directed by Mrs. Roger Merriam, will assist as ushers and program sellers, and backing the presentation there is an impressive list of sponsors quite vast in proportion and equally weighty as to importance.

GIRL SLAYER'S FATE HANGS ON SANITY

San Francisco, March 30 (I. N. S.).—The stage was set today for a surprise move to end the "trial by torture" of Dorothy Ellingson, 16-year-old matricide.

First was the prospect that the defence might halt the trial by a request that the girl's sanity be examined. Second was the slim prospect that a last minute agreement might be reached to permit the girl to enter a plea of guilty to manslaughter.

Dr. Fred P. Clark has publicly expressed his opinion that the girl is now insane. Dr. Jan Doo Ball, noted psychiatrist, spent Sunday in final observation of the girl in the quietude of the Engleside jail.

Defence counsel admitted that upon receipt of his findings they might be moved to take this spectacular means of ending the present trial.

How to Avoid "Rings" in Removing Grease Spots

1. Place a clean cloth or blotter under the Grease Spot. (This is to carry away the Grease as it runs through the fabric after it is dissolved by the Carbona.)
2. Saturate a clean cloth with Carbona, using it freely, and gently rub the Grease Spot back and forth with a sweeping motion as illustrated—never rub in circles. Raise your hand at the end of each stroke after passing the edge of the spot. (This blends the edges of the spot cleaned with the rest of the fabric and prevents a "ring".)
3. Rub gently as it is the Carbona that cleans, not the rubbing.

BETTER ROADS MAINE'S NEW SLOGAN

The State of Maine from the Copley-Plaza Hotel, has issued a defi to the Summer playgrounds of Europe, the Grand Canyon, the Pacific Coast and every other section of the wide world that makes a bid for the flood of tourist gold that pours each Summer from the purses of pleasure-seeking Americans.

At a banquet of members of the Maine State Highway Commission, plans were outlined for the transformation of Maine into a tourists' paradise, through the medium of a network of improved highways.

From coast to coast the beauties of Maine are to be extolled in an advertising campaign of national scope and no stone is to be left unturned in an effort to flood Maine with vacationists who, here-to-fore, have thought it necessary to travel far afield for recreation and "a change."

STUDY GOOD ROADS.

Senator Clyde Smith, chairman of the Joint Committee of Highways and Bridges of the Maine Legislature, was one of the principal speakers at the booster banquet which was tendered by Manager Arthur L. Race of the Copley-Plaza.

"We wish to ascertain what good roads have done for Massachusetts and what we must do in Maine to attain similar advantages and to open up and develop especially the 'show window' of Maine, the Kittery-Portland road.

"The road from Kittery bridge on into Portland was once very good, but it is now in bad shape. This gathering will endeavor to arouse interest in this highway. From Portland on up the State the roads are good, and the road leading into our State suffers by comparison. For instance, we have a million dollar cement road from Portland on into Lewiston.

"We found the road from Portland to Kittery very bad, but this Legislature now in session will take active steps to rebuild it. There is no State that has come ahead any faster in the past eight years and we want our roads to be among the best in the country."

"California has had advertising. Florida is now getting it and Maine needs it," said Paul D. Sargent, chief engineer of the highway department. "Maine needs publicity and lots of it. Maine needs more industries, more population and more payrolls. We have and shall continue to build roads that are the best possible for in the long run they are cheaper, for the maintenance is much lower.

"Maine is a great farming State, and we need better and more roads for the farmers and for the tourist travel in the Summer months. It is only a matter of time when our roads will be up to the standard of the roads in other States.

PRAISES CLIMATE.

"We want Boston and Massachusetts people to come up in Maine and we want to give them a hearty welcome by presenting them good roads to travel on. We have started a nation-wide invitation slogan which is, 'Invite them to play and persuade them to stay.' We do not want tourists to avoid Maine because of the fact that the Kittery-Portland road is not what it should be."

"There is no better climate in the world," said Hiram W. Ricker, owner of the famous Poland Spring House at Poland, "than there is in our State. Not only it is ideal in Summer but it has unsurpassed advantages in the Winter months.

"The reason for our delightful climate is due to the fact that we have in Maine more than 2,300 lakes, 1400 of which are under State control. It is the moisture from these lakes that makes the Maine climate so beneficial to all. Then there is our 2,300 miles of sea coast and our fifteen million acres of timber lands. The total assessed valuation of the State is more than seven hundred million dollars, one-third of which represents agriculture.

ALL EAGER TO AID.

"We have every natural advantage man could ask for, all we need is publicity to develop the State. In the next fifty years Maine will grow very rapidly, but we must have good roads to aid us, and especially do we need a good road from Kittery to Portland.

"Our folks pride themselves on being conservative, as does all of New England, and Maine is but an integral part of this section of the country, but never in the history of the State has everyone seemed as eager to co-operate and work together for the perpetuation and development of Maine.

"It greatly amuses me to hear persons say that New England has had her day and is fast becoming antiquated and going to seed. Why New England will experience more prosperity from now on than she ever had. The tide of travel out of our section has for the past five or six years been coming back instead of leaving for the West, and more and more persons are coming here to make permanent homes.

DESERTS OF TOURISTS.

"These persons who now enjoy their vacation in their automobiles going from place to place go more slowly than they did in former years, that is they stay longer in one place, and they deserve to have good roads. They will have them when they come to Maine, for we are determined to make it the greatest State in the country."

The men who attended the banquet and made the inspection trip are:

Herbley F. Ripley, South Paris, chairman executive committee, Maine Automobile Association; Representative J. W. Hammond, Van Buren, taxation committee; Representative H. C. Marden, Waldo, highway and bridges committee; Representative C. L. Pike, Lubec, highways and bridges; F. G. Ryder, Brownville; Arthur G. Staple, editor, Lewiston Journal, Lewiston; Byron Boyd, Augusta, former secretary of State; Joseph W. Simpson, York Harbor, National Republican Committee.

Charles H. Innes, Saco, highway commission; Frank A. Peabody, Houlton, chairman highway commission; Paul D. Sargent, Augusta, chief engineer of the highway department; Senator Walter N. Miner, Calais, budget committee; Hiram Ricker, Poland; Representative J. W. Leland, Dover-Foxcroft, highways and bridges committee; Representative H. W. Kitchen, Presque Isle, highways and bridges; Senator F. H. Bond, Jefferson, highways and bridges; Arthur D. Marshall, Portland, Maine Automobile Association.

WAR ROMANCE IN STYLES PICTURE

The "Dressmaker From Paris," featuring Leatrice Joy, Allen Forrest, Mildred Harris and Ernest Torrence, is the major attraction at the Fenway Theatre this week.

What happens when Paris fashions come to Main street, Clarion, Ill., forms the light plot that runs along to the final fade-out.

A Paris mannequin, played by Leatrice Joy, meets an American Army officer of 1918 in France and a war romance is kindled, but is halted abruptly by the fortunes of war which recall the officer, Captain Brent, home.

The scene shifts to the year 1925 in Clarion, Ill. Brent has taken command of the Main street emporium belonging to his home-town fiancee's father, Angus MacGregor, capitally played by Ernest Torrence. MacGregor believed that what was in style fifty years ago would come back in another fifty years or so.

Clarion ladies do not resemble Fogue's patterns. Young Brent imports Mme. Louise to boost Clarion's styles in the absence of his prospective father-in-law.

Mme. Louise is none other than Brent's wartime sweetheart and when she arrives on Main street, Clarion, with twenty Parisienne mannequins and the very latest in gowns and hats the brass band forgets to play the "Marseillies" and strikes up "Hail, Hail the Gang's All Here," instead.

Brent is torn between past and Main street styles in fiancees. The Paris mannequins put on a style show that leaves the small town gossips gasping but the men cheering. The Main street mob nearby drive the Paris dressmaker from town, but she is rescued by old MacGreggor, who discovers that Mme. Louise has protected his daughter who loves another man.

So the pattern of the plot runs smoothly at last for Paris dressmakers, young Brent, Parisienne costumes and pretty mannequins.

RETREATS OPEN IN CATHOLIC CHURCHES

More than 75,000 members of the Boston arch-diocese of the Roman Catholic Church are participating in the annual Passion Week retreat.

In a majority of the churches the throngs of men tax the edifices to the limit of their capacity. The retreats will continue throughout the week with special services each morning and evening.

This year marks an epoch in the retreats at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, South End, conducted under the direction of the Young Men's Catholic Association—the golden jubilee of the services. It was this organization that in reality gave impetus to the Passion Week retreats.

Both the upper and lower parts of the church were needed to accommodate the 5,000 or more men present on the opening night. Rev. John J. Geoghan, S. J., president of Boston College High School, preached in the upper church and Rev. John E. Welch, S. J., in the lower church. The choir of the association rendered the musical program, under the direction of Lawrence B. O'Connor, organist and director.

One of the interesting events of the services in the Catholic churches was the beginning of the annual course of eight lectures in the Cathedral of the Holy Cross by Rev. James T. McDermott, O. M. I., of Lowell, who spoke on "Jesus Christ Is God."

Besides the retreat for men at the Church of the Immaculate Conception, there were others at St. Mary's, North End;

"Stop where you are or you are a dead man!" roared the officer.

The Story Thus Far

J. B. HARDIMAN owned the house at Ryeneck. Mrs. Nancy Adams lived in it. Overnight, Barbara Brown found herself strangely mistress of the house. Hardiman summoned Barbara's landlady and whispered certain instructions to her. Then Kurt Scheurer came to the house to talk over his symphonic tone poem, only to find that Mrs. Adams was gone. Barbara wrote to her father in the South Seas. Nan's husband stole the letter and suggested that they blackmail Hardiman.

WITHIN twenty-four hours, Hannah, I've thrown off one man, knocked out another and bounced a third. I'm going to bed now, Hannah. And when I wake up—beware!"

She wheeled. Her heroic attempt at dignity was frustrated by the sheet she wore, which tripped her as she opened the door. She fell into the bed. Rising, she went to the door, and cut off a retort from Hannah by slamming it, with all the strength she had left, in the housekeeper's face.

She was cold. There was a kick or two left in the dying Winter. She wound herself in the bedding, and gradually her body warmed. She had no right to sleep. She was a woman of many problems, and acquainted with grief.

There was a telephone downstairs.

Wrapped in her bedsheet she could creep downstairs. She could get to that phone, and call up some friend for help.

What friend?

Her mother was dead. She had no brothers, no sisters. Her father was in Sayvouillan, wherever that was, and were he across the street she wouldn't appeal to him.

Whom could she call?
Not a soul.
Not a soul in the world.

* * *

She judged the hour of her awakening to be midnight.

SAYS G. O. P. MAN BROKE PROMISE

Wealthy Colonel Ullman of New Haven Is Named in Court as Boy's Father

New York, March 30.—Colonel Isaac M. Ullman, New Haven Republican leader and corset manufacturer, was before Supreme Court today in a suit brought by Florence Heddington, a nurse, who charges breach of promise and says Ullman is father of her four-year-old son, Agnew. She asks $150,000 damages.

Joseph Koletsky of New Haven, attorney for Miss Reddington, pleaded for a delay in the trial, saying that a prominent attorney who had been expected to act as trial counsel had failed to accept a retainer in that capacity and that he desired to engage another New York lawyer of prominence.

Former Judge William M. K. Olcott, for Colonel Ullman, opposed delay and Justice Guy marked the case ready. A jury was then selected, but upon Mr. Koletsky's pleadings the trial was put over until tomorrow.

MUSSOLINI GREETED BY CHEERS IN SENATE

Rome, March 30 (A.P.).—Premier Mussolini was given an enthusiastic ovation upon his appearance before the Senate today for the first time since his illness. All the Senators, including opposition members, applauded the Premier. SOignor Tittoni, president of the Senate, delivered a short speech congratulating Mussolini upon the recovery of his health.

Chemists Defend 'Canned Heat' Druggist

Portland, Me., March 30.—Three nationally known chemical experts were in court here today to testify for the defence in the municipal court in the case of Luigi Dejulio, local druggist, charged with unlawful possession of 197 cans of canned heat.

The experts are Professor Virgil Colbentz of New York, who is professor emeritus of Columbia University; J. Wysocki of Baltimore, and Dr. I. M. Burghart, also of Baltimore, who is attached as chemist to the corporation preparing the alcohol used by the manufacturers of canned heat.

The druggist's arrest followed an investigation of an increase in the number of alcoholic victims who had been drinking canned heat obtained from some undetermined source.

GALLIVAN AND CURLEY BURY HATCHET

Mayor Curley and Congressman Gallivan, enemies since the historic mayoralty campaign when the Gaffivan fight for the office brought about the defeat of the Mayor, apparently have buried the hatchet.

The first public demonstration of the resumption of friendly relations between the Mayor and the South Boston Congressman came at a dinner at the Hotel Brunswick.

The dinner was given by 600 members of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks to Congressman Clyde Kelley of Pennsylvania in recognition of the part he played in obtaining passage of the bill increasing the pay of postal workers.

Congressman Gallivan was one of the guests because of his work in behalf of the pay increase measure.

The Mayor was one of the speakers.

The Congressman was seated when the Mayor passed behind his chair. "Why, good evening, Mr. Congressman. How are you? I trust you are well," was the greeting of Mayor Curley.

"Couldn't be better, Mayor. I trust you are well," countered the Congressman.

The men gathered about the tables gasped. It was the first public greeting the two political leaders had extended to one another in public in many years.

Then to top the matter off, the Mayor, in his address in which he praised the Congressmen and Senators who worked for the postal pay bill, took occasion to pay a warm tribute to the South Boston representative.

Political leaders today are deep in speculation as to just what may be expected next.

LABOR WAR NEAR IN BUILDING

Contractors and Employes Issue Statements on Eve of Crisis

With the Building Trades Council of Massachusetts, representing 50,000 skilled artisans backing up Boston unions in their refusal to sign three-year agreements with builders at the present rate of wages, and with the contractors announcing that they will never grant higher wages, the outlook is for a crisis in two days.

The skilled and unskilled laborers employed in the Boston building trades have further complicated the delicate situation by coming forth with demands for increased pay.

OFFER RESOURCES.

Executives of the State building trades council today declared the State organization's resources would be placed at the disposal of the Boston workers in event of a strike, while the strikers would receive the moral support of organized labor throughout the State.

While the labor council executives were meeting, the International Hod Carriers' and Common Laborers' Union was meeting to demand a new wage scale of 90 cents an hour for skilled labor and 80 cents an hour for unskilled labor. The present rate is 70 and 65 cents an hour.

The show-down will come this week. The agreements of the 27 building trade unions in Boston expire at midnight, tomorrow. There is no new agreement, as in those of the bricklayers and carpenters, and these articles have not yet been signed by the labor leaders.

In a statement issued by John F. Walsh, secretary of the Building Trades Employers' Association, it was declared that the average wages of the building trades mechanics exceed the average earnings in all other industries.

WHAT CONTRACTORS SAY.

"The Building Trades Employers' Association is unable to find any ordinary wage-earners who possibly can stand a further increase in rent. We do know that there are many thousands of workers outside of the building trades who receive less than one-half the wages paid to building trades mechanics and we find that these people are actually struggling and denying their families today the necessary food and nourishment they actually require for maintenance of health in order to meet present rent bills.

"The members of our association are convinced that there is a real necessity and obligation now before the building trades employers to recognize the rights of other citizens, and not defiantly and disastrously insist on adding to the budget of expense by raising building prices to meet increased wage demands, and feel that the building trades mechanics owe a similar obligation towards the public, of which we are all a part, at least to endeavor to keep prices where they are, in view of the equitable and high rates of wages."

BANDITS TAKE $75,000 DIAMONDS IN HOLDUP

New York, March 30 (I.N.S.).—Four bandits today robbed Sobel & Kaleko, diamond merchants, of gems said to be worth $75,000. The bandits entered the firm's office on the ninth floor of 49 Maiden lane and ordered Tivai Kaleko, one of the partners, and three other men, to hold up their hands. The bandits then tied the hands of each man, picked up several wallets containing cut stones, descended a fire escape and disappeared.

FEARS BIG MAN WITH "EVIL EYE"

Mrs. Deborah G. Bridges of No. 591 Tremont street, who has asked police protection against a swarthy man of sinister appearance and an "evil eye," who, she says, threatened her with death unless she leaves Boston at once.

THREAT NOTES BAFFLE HUB POLICE

Boston and Somerville police are baffled by the strange case presented to them by two sisters, Mrs. Deborah G. Bridges, a nurse living at No. 591 Tremont street, South End, and Mrs. Oliver Spanney of No. 11 Curtis avenue, Somerville.

Both women claim that during the past two weeks their lives have been threatened. Unsigned letters and mysterious telephone calls have been received by both sisters.

Mrs. Bridges, who is thirty years of age, is in a state of nervous collapse. She declares that a man weighing over 200 pounds, with "evil eye" has been following her everywhere for several weeks. A police guard has been established at her home in an effort to capture the stranger.

ALBANY WOMAN IS CRABTREE CLAIMANT

A descendant of the British nobility has joined the host of men and women seeking a portion of the millions left by the late Lotta M. Crabtree.

The latest claimant is Minnie Elizabeth Lehmann, forty-two years old, of Albany, N. Y., who claims to be a granddaughter of Thomas Livesey, who was an uncle of the dead actress.

Her grandfather, Miss Lehmann claims, was married to the daughter of Lord John North, sixth Earl of Guilford, of England.

Miss Lehmann is the only one of the fifty or more who lay claim to being descendants of nobility. The news that Lotta M. Crabtree's ancestors were related to the Earl of Guilford came as a distinct surprise to the executors of the Crabtree will and counsel for the estate. The title was created in 1683.

GARTERS GIVE WAY TO ART

Short Skirts in Classrooms Also Disclose Verses Sketched in Ink

Bare knees adorned with ink sketches of comic characters, or snappy verses written with India ink is the latest fad among New England high school girls.

Garters adorned with rows of tinkling bells have met with such consistent opposition from "old-fashioned" school authorities through the New England States, that the bell fad is rapidly falling into disrepute.

PORTLAND STARTS FAD.

Hand-painted knees, however, are noiseless. When a teacher comes by, the skirts are discreetly down over the expanse of pink that otherwise shows beneath the edge of the flapper's skirt.

Portland, Me., is believed to have been the first city to introduce the latest fad. Despite the efforts of the girls of the Portland high school to conceal their decorated knees from the eyes of the faculty, the teachers learned of the new fad and a vigorous crusade already is under way.

The new style requires some ability as an artist, which opens up an entirely new field of employment for those who have an aptitude for drawing and painting.

One very flippery young Portland flapper, excited the admiration and envy of the other girls in the school when she discreetly displayed a pair of bare knees, decorated in the snappiest 1925 style.

BARNEY GOOGLE ON KNEE.

The grinning features of Barney Google adorned one girl's knee cap. When the flapper's knee joint moved, Barney's face moved and twitched in most realistic fashion.

This young girl's other knee bore a snappy, four-line verse of poetry. The Portland school authorities for several years have permitted the High School girls to roll their stockings.

The painted knees, however, have presented complications, however, which are expected to result in a drastic order directing that the knees of all students be covered with stockings.

CATHOLIC LAUDS MASON FOR HIS TOLERANCE

New York, March 30.—At a K. of C. banquet here the grand master of the New York State Lodge of Masons was praised for his tolerance by County Judge Tiernan of Richmond, a Roman Catholic. The grand master referred to is Supreme Court Justice Tompkins. He is regarded as the proven foe of bigotry, racial or religious.

RED SOX BREAK CAMP TONIGHT IN EXCELLENT CONDITION

FOHL SURE PROTHRO WILL PROVE BIG AID WITH THE BLUDGEON

By FRED C. LANE

New Orleans, La., March 30.—"This club, man for man, is in better physical condition than was Jack Dempsey when he trained for his go with Carpentier," said Manager Lee Fohl as his Red Sox athletes hustled about the hotel checking baggage and making ready for their two-day invasion of Mobile, which gets under way tonight.

"Not only is the club in fine fettle physically but we leave the training camp this season much stronger," continued Fohl. "One thing is certain, we have added strength at third base. While Danny Clark was hitting last year he was in the thickest of the fight. As soon as they got his number why we started to slide, helped along, of course, by injuries to Harris and Boone at the same time.

"Prothro handles himself well. He has a great throwing arm and I am thoroughly convinced he can hit. I figure Prothro to be a consistent hitter. It's all a gamble, however, and time is the best judge.

"The pitching should be better this year. I personally will string along with the veterans but am on the lookout for a youngster or two who can step in and give the club an even break.

"This lad Kallio handles himself well. He uses good judgment on every ball he pitches. In addition, he has a fine change of pace while curving a ball is his best asset.

"I saw enough of Fred Wingfield last year to trail along with him for a while also. He showed me plenty of ability and heart and should be a valuable asset to the club this year."

MANAGER FOHL TALKATIVE.

Fohl for the first time on the trip was talkative. He is a bit optimistic as well. He is not working altogether on possibilities, for there are even on this club who have shown enough baseball traits to warrant them a chance.

But Connolly, who showed so well the first two weeks out and has since faded a slight tint, is still a favorite with Fohl.

"How can a boy show so much and not come back?" commented the Red pilot. "He is mentally tired just now; perhaps worrying a bit, but I look for him to come around soon and mature into a good ball player."

The question of hitting was next discussed. The club has been doing very little with bludgeon in their series of games with the new Orleans Pelicans. Fohl's answer was: "This is a hard place to hit in. It suits those local ball players to a T, but for strangers to become acclimated in three weeks is almost impossible."

LOOKS FOR HITTING.

"Fellows like Harris, Boone and Flagstead who have been in the 300 class should hit their stride soon and unless I miss my guess you fellows can look for some real hitting when the club reaches Louisville."

Manager Fohl for attendance sake will start an all-star Southern League team against the Mobile Bears on Wednesday. Harris, Wamby, Lee and Prothro in the infield, Boone, Flagstead and Williams will make up the outfield. The pitchers are yet to be decided upon. These hurlers who do work will give more than three innings of service. Five and possibly seven stanzas will be the daily menu from now on.

The Red Sox will encounter three former members of the team playing with Kid Elberfield's club. In all probability George Murray, last year's pitcher, will hurl one of the games with Al Devormer, a catcher.

Murray has an axe to grind with the Quinn performers which may find him at his best. Little Ray Oeschger, given a tryout with the Sox last year as a shortstop, played exceptionally fine ball for Mobile last year in the short field.

There was some talk of leaving Jimmy Geygan with the New Orleans club but this rumor was nailed by Manager Fohl himself. Only veteran players are wanted in this town. A young pitcher may have a chance but other than that President Heinemann of the local delegation takes no fliers on youngsters coming through. A pennant winner or contender is all that goes in this city.

The squad will remain intact until Boston is reached. That is the present plan unless Bob Quinn places one or two of these young pitchers that are about.

BRAVES BEGIN LAST WEEK OF TRAINING AT ST. PETERSBURG

By NICK FLATLEY

St. Petersburg, Fla., March 30.—Our Braves, with the Spring conflicts all a matter of history, started their last week of torrid training today. It will be an easy sort of a stretch—just enough to keep the boys who have been working all the time on edge; just enough to round into shape the few minor cripples on the squad.

The only skirmishes on the list will be against the St. Petersburg club of the Florida League, one on Wednesday and the other on Friday. Sunday the squad starts for the North.

It has been, when everything is considered, a very successful Southern campaign. The Braves lost most of the games they played to the American Leaguers but they licked their two big enemies, the Senators and the Giants. There's consolation and plenty of room for reflection in that.

As regards the Giants, there's the natural rivalry that exists between tailenders and champions in any league. So the tribe went after the Giants hard. They tied them in the first game, in thirteen innings, and then walloped them in the second pastime.

CLUB SHOWS FIGHT.

The club as a whole was sore on the Washington outfit. For three years the Senators have travelled North with the Braves. They were supposed to do so this Spring. But when the world title went to the Capitol, the Boston entry was handed the air.

Naturally the players as well as the officials were sore. The Braves had two shots at the universal champions, and licked them both times. That was enough glory for any Spring. It showed the world that the club has a little fight when it gets in a corner. And no Boston National team has had that asset for considerable time.

It is the general opinion of all the baseball men we have seen in the South that the Boston representatives will surely pass the Phils and get out of the cellar. It is also widely believed that the club may climb a few notches higher in the race.

HARRIS HIT FROM START.

The owners came South intending to trade and swap at the scene of camp activities. But they found that the boys the Spring were better than they had been in the Winter. The Columbus club, for instance, wanted almost $50,000 for Brooks, an outfielder who has a lot of possibilities. The Seattle club asked almost as much for Baldwin, a third baseman with undoubted class.

Our Braves might have been forced into the mint to get the two athletes had not some of their new candidates blossomed forth as great prospects.

Dave Harris, the Carolina sheriff, was given a chance in the outfield the first day out, and never could be pried off the job. Bill Marriott, third baseman, looked like a million dollars from the start, and the magnates forgot Mister Baldwin.

NEW ARRAY OF TALENT.

It was the same story all along the line. The club will start the season with an almost entirely new array of talent. Manager Bancroft will be the only infielder of the old regime, the outfield will be entirely new. That's as much change as any club could make in a single season.

The pitchers and catchers will be the same as previously, but there was no complaint found with the battery work of the club last season. Had the rest of the throng lived up to the possibilities of the sharpshooters and backstops the team would never have finished under all the rest.

The big disappointment of the Spring has been Tim McNamara. Tim, as you recall, was a Fall sensation two years ago. He stepped in and pitched three great ball games. He was fresh from college and looked like another Johnson or Matherson. Every club in baseball wanted him, but the Braves refused to let him go. He was too valuable.

McNAMARA TO GO.

Tim hit the bumps last season, but everybody else did, so he still had the real chance in front. But he hasn't been able to do anything this Spring. The new spirit of the club, the fact that the boys could go out and get a few runs now and then didn't help the Fordham youth a bit. He will probably be let out along about the time the minor leaguers get going.

School Notes

Captain Jack Wallace, life-saving instructor for the New England division of the American Red Cross, is training the boys of Boston English High twice a week at the Cabot street municipal pool and his pupils are doing remarkably well.

Captain Jack Werby and Coach James Crowley, athletic instructors at the school are following the efforts of the boys with more than ordinary interest and affording every possible aid. Manager "Pop" Austin represented E. H. S. at the annual banquet and was also the high individual scorer at the interscholastic life-saving meet at the Y. M. C. A. tank. The Buff and Blue team is considered one of the best in New England.

The E. H. S. fencing team is out to turn the tables on Commerce when the teams meet again April 6. Commerce recently took the Blue and Blue into camp, 6 to 3.

Captain "Charlie" Colleton of the English High track team, a protege of Coach Jack Ryder of B. A. A., can be seen ecasionally on the Franklin Field cinder track plodding along industriously. Captain Colleton has hung up his indoor shoes for the season, and intends to be in the winning column in the outdoor season. The scholastic sport followers expect "Charlie" to be as big a here outdoors as he was indoors, His teammate, Clardino, is also showing his wares, and intends to keep his name on the athletic map.

More than 150 candidates reported to Coach Prendergast of the Dorchester High nine for the first outdoor practice of the season.

The coach will cut the squad down to about thirty-five this week.

Much is expected this year of Billy Ray, the veteran pitcher.

Cheek Hits at "Big Three" Athletic Reformers

Harvard Varsity Eleven Captain Declares Athletes Should Be Allowed to Play Summer Ball

Athletic reformers in "Big Three" circles, who insist that only athletes who live up to the amateur playing code in every respect shall be allowed to represent Harvard, Yale and Princeton in sports were roundly scored by "Dolph" Cheek, captain of the Harvard varsity eleven, in a talk before the Men's Club of the North Congregational Church, Cambridge.

Claiming that the "Big Three" are "carrying the point of mistrust too far against the college football athlete," Cheek made a stirring plea in defense of the college athlete, especially the one who is forced to work his way through college.

He declared that several colleges outside of the "Big Three" allowed students to play Summer ball to earn money to defray their college expenses, and then permitted them to represent the college on the athletic field, and that these same colleges were given places on the schedules of "Big Three" teams.

He said that he believed that if the practice was permissable in small colleges it should be at Harvard, Yale and Princeton.

The Crimson captain declared that the boys who had to work their way through college and were anxious to join the college athletic teams had to wear themselves out during vacations working as clerks or laborers, and said that they should be allowed to benefit from their athletic prowess.

In conclusion, he asserted: "The people who are making all these rules and causing the college athlete to bare his financial situation and account for every action of his in athletics, are going too far and, in their efficiency, are jumping at conclusions."

"CAPT. "DOLPH" CHEEK.

Tennis Candidates Report Today

All the first meeting of the candidates for the Harvard tennis team will be held this afternoon at the freshman gymnasium. Coach Cowles and W. W. Ingram, captain, will address the candidates.

Practice will be held indoors until the outdoor courts are ready for use. At present the courts are still a bit soggy as the frost has not completely left the ground.

The tennis schedule follows:

April 18, Agawam Hunt Club at Providence; 20, Country Club of Virginia, at Richmond; 21, Norfolk Country Club at Norfolk, Va.; 23, Chevy Chase Club at Washington; 24, Baltimore Country Club at Gallimore; 25, Columbia at New York; May 2, Williams at Williamstown; 6, University of Pennsylvania; 9, Longwood (tentative); 12, M. I. T.; 16, Business School (tentative); 20, Princeton; 23, Yale at New Haven.

Outdoor Track Work Starts Wednesday

The Spring track season at Harvard will begin Wednesday at 3 p. m. with a meeting at the locker building on Soldiers Field. Immediately after the meeting the first practice will make place.

Coach Eddie Farrell says the men who will come out make the best track team he has seen since he came to Harvard. "We will have a very well-balanced team," he said, "a team exceptionally strong in the long distance running events, a little weak in one or two field events, although the weakest events are better than they were last year.

INSIDE GOLF

By CHESTER HORTON

Maker of 41 Golf Champions, "Golf's most successful teacher." says "Chick" Evans.

It is one thing to hit the golf ball so it will carry far, but it is another thing to hit it so it will carry far — and straight. The first is comparatively simple. Accomplishing a consistent straight ball impels a necessary consideration of details that would appear to be trivial, yet the straight ball is in the nature of an exact science. The little things that bend the ball sometimes are due to a lack of knowledge concerning them, or again they may result from habitually doing a small thing in the wrong way or, as is most usually the case, plain carelessness may be the factor. I will touch on some of these things in subsequent articles this week.

'Y' EXHIBITION TEAM TO ENTERTAIN 'VETS'

The exhibition team of the Huntington avenue branch of the Boston Y. M. C. The program will include drills, fencing, club swinging, athletic dancing, tumbling, boxing and wrestling.

GIBBONS TO BOX WILLS OR TUNNEY IN N. Y.

Chicago, March 30.—Eddie Kane, manager of Tommy Gibbons, is en route for New York to close a match with either Gene Tunney, light heavyweight champion, or Harry Wills, Negro challenger for Jack Dempsey's heavyweight crown, the match to be decided in New York within the next three months. Unless something unexpected should happen, Kane expects to sign for the contest not later than tomorrow. In the Hunter mile at the B. A. A. Paavo Nurmi will make his final appearance in Boston when he comes here to run in the special scratch one and a half mile run at the Elks games tomorrow night at Mechanics Hall.

The race will be also the "Phantom Finn's" last indoor appearance in this part of the United States.

Three of Nurmi's greatest rivals are among the five he will face in the special scratch race, Joie Ray, Loyd Hahn and Jimmy Connolly.

Nurmi is out to break the record and so is Ray, and they have nothing on Loyd Hahn as far as betting to set a new mark is concerned. Loyd will come especially from Houston, Texas, to take another whack at Paavo and the record of 6 minutes 39 2-5 seconds, made by Nurmi at the Millrose games in New York more than two months ago and equalled by him early this month.

Ray begged the athletic committee to get Nurmi's consent to a special scratch race at any distance. Joie, who ran a sensational race in the Hunter mile at the B. A. A. games, is confident he can and will take the Flying Finn's measure in this race. Haha is just as confident as Ray and a triagulan race from the gun to the finish is in prospect for tomorrow night.

Jimmy Connolly, the popular Woburn boy, will be a starter, also. Jimmy has given Paavo several hard battles in other races and should be a contender every second of the contest.

Willie Ritola, the Finn's great rival and pal, will start from scratch in the two-mile run, and such stars as Frank Hussey, Dalrymple of Dartmouth, Charley Eastman of Harvard, and Tom Clausen will compete in their favorite events.

STRIBLING TO MEET TUNNEY ON COAST

San Francisco, March 30.—Young Stribling, Georgia schoolboy boxer, has been promised a match in San Francisco with Gene Tunney, American light heavyweight champion, April 18, as the result of Stribling's ten-round decision over Tommy Loughran of Philadelphia. The promoters say the Stribling-Tunney bout will involve the title.

SENATORS AND COMBS GIVES GIANTS TILT AGAIN

Washington, March 30.—The Senators took a tighter grip on their hats today with a determination to better their record of one victory and three defeats in their series with the Giants.

In romping away with the game with the Toledo American Association Club at St. Augustine, 9 to 1, this champion team showed triple play. With three on, Ogden, in the box, deflected a hot drive with his glove to McNally, a short, who caught the ball in a dive and tossed it to Harris as second, who got it to Judge at first for the third out.

Philadelphia, March 30.—The Philadelphia Athletics, homeward bound from their southern training camps in Eustis, Fla., today for an exhibition game with the Baltimore International.

Reports from the Phillies' training camp at Bradenstown, Fla., said that Manager Fletcher was busy denying reports that Jimmy Ring, one of his leading pitchers, might go to Brooklyn in a trade.

St. Louis, March 30.—Regulars on the St. Louis Cardinal squad said good-bye to Stockton, Cal. today and packed their bags for a week in San Francisco before beginning the trip back to St. Louis.

By JACK CONWAY

JIMMY SLATTERY, sensational Buffalo middleweight, will do his stuff in Boston tonight. This twenty-year-old youngster will have Augie Ratner of New York as an opponent in a ten-round bout at the Commercial A. C.'s show at Mechanics Building.

Slattery has won two decisions over Jack Delaney in six-round bouts. He has also outpointed Young Stribling over the six-session route. All of which makes him the outstanding opponent for a ring quarrel with Harry Greb, boss of the middleweight division of the dese old cauliflower industry.

When Slattery fires Ratner, it will be the first time the Buffalo youth has started in a ten-round bout. The New York boxing law does not permit mitt wiederns under twenty-one years of age to participate in contests of more than six rounds.

Slattery is now ready to step out and battle the best man of his weight over the Derby route. He believes that by the latter part of the Summer he will be ready to mingle with Greb.

Slattery Relies on His Amazing Speed

SLATTERY is one of the best boxers to come to the front during the past decade. He is a keen student of the fine points of the fistic racket and is blessed with a world of speed. On occasions he becomes up and tramps flows with his opponents with reckless abandon.

Slattery shoots a left-hand punches in both of their boots while his southpaw is nothing to think it was training boxing events.

Now Mister Augie Ratner steps to bat determined to prove that the Slattery fan of his is all wrong.

Ratner is a ring veteran. He was winning laurels under the fostering care of the ex-ring when young Slattery was in the early grades of school up in Buffalo. Augie has made things uncomfortable for Jack Magone and Jack Shade in skirmishes at the Arena.

Ratner is what the experts call a "smart" fighter. Which means that Slattery won't have any picnic while going tonight. Even, naturally, he is favored to grab the blue ribbons.

Honeyboy Finnegan to Battle Eddie Williams

GREB-DELANEY TITLE BOUT MAKING

By ED CURLEY.

New York, March 30.—Harry Greb, the middleweight title holder, will in all probability be the next champion to transact business with our worthy boxing commission.

Jack Delaney, the young man who crushed Tiger Flowers into a mess of leaves will be the cause of the commission getting in communication with Greb.

Pete Reilly, who directs the destiny of Delaney, is going to step into the sanctum of the commissioner very shortly, all down a certified check of $2,500 and hurl a challenge at the titleholder.

This match looms up as a "pip" [illegible] and the commission will immediately notify Greb of the proposition. There is little doubt that Greb will accept, for he has yet to turn down a respectable offer. In fact Greb has amazed the fighting world by taking on men who figured to be sure thing.

On the match is officially announced and Greb accepts the deft, there will be a battle among the promoters for the quarrel. World championships are going to be so scarce this summer that they will be wonderful magnets at the gate. This bout will be more than ordinary, for the deposers of the [illegible] Flowers. The latter nearly outpointed Greb a few months ago. When the Tiger snapped at Delaney the latter knocked him for a row of ringboats not once but twice.

Hub Soccer Team Beats Fall River in Cup Match

The result of the game played here on Tiverton square, the largest field to see a soccer game in the United States, was a big surprise.

The game opened very fast. The Marksmen rushed to the Hibernians goal. McGann shooting. Steel put the ball over the bar for a corner. Hannah saved the ball. McNab then forced Hibernians and the game [illegible] to advance and the ball time [illegible] The Fall River goalie saw the ball was when he picked it out of the net, since he shot beating him all the way for Boston's first goal after three minutes' play.

McNab starting in put Boston in the lead with only five minutes to play. The Boston rooters went wild. Fall River tried hard to get the ball into the Boston goal but could not pass the Hibernians defense.

Mother!
Watch out for film on child's teeth

That's a danger signal. If the dentifrice you are using doesn't successfully remove it, do this —the new tooth care children's dentists advise.

FOREMOST dental authorities now advise a new way in caring for a child's teeth. A way different in formula, action and effect from any other method.

As a nation-wide hygiene movement, a 10-day test is offered mothers free.

You are urged to make it. To see what modern science is doing for the better protection of children's teeth and gums. Simply use the coupon.

What film indicates. Why it must be fought several times daily

Look at your child's teeth. If cloudy, dull, discolored, there's a film. And that film is often a danger sign. The child can feel it by running his tongue across his teeth.

Ordinary tooth pastes won't combat it successfully. Try the one you now use. See if the film does not still remain.

Film is a viscous coat that clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It makes pearly teeth ugly, discolored—dingy. Many a naturally pretty child is handicapped in this way.

Film also holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay. Germs by millions breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea and gum troubles.

How way removed it. And Firms the Gums

Now modern science has found a safe way to combat film. Supersafety substances are judged dangerous to the teeth. Soap and chalk methods are inadequate.

This new method, embodied in the tooth paste called Pepsodent, provides the scientifically proved combatant that is being adopted by the people of some 50 nations. Its action is to curdle the film, then harmlessly to remove it.

Two Tubes Free

Don't you think it worth while, in justice to your children, and in fairness to yourself, to try it for ten days? The test will cost you nothing. Use the coupon for a 10-day tube, free.

SHEBO ☙ The Girl Who Became a Boy

Facing Life Fearlessly, This Girl of Today Meets Each Problem as It Comes

She did and sat on the bed. For an hour, wrapped in the overcoat, she sat up and down. In two thousand hypotheses she considered but there was but one solution.

Having come to a decision, her spirits soared.

She worked in the dark on the rumpled linen with the deft ease gained from arms and legs in every sort and wretched a little time.

Her fingers were cold, but beautiful practice for the first time in her life she knew it. Too, no need for trying and failing.

There now was no going back to the lonely and comfortless past.

Reconnaissance.

She found the exact center of the sheet and in it made a small slit with her teeth. When a section was a finger through the opening. Then she pulled the sheet over her head and fastened it in the opening with a safety pin.

If I can't hide there my clothes, where will I find them?

She could find no satisfactory answer to her question. There was only one way to proceed.

The hour of dawn was far near. She knew that the lower floor of the house—Hildreth's—would be the best place to begin operations. She had on a single glance of the geography of that part of the house.

The white ghost tiptoed through a corridor.

Her heart clamored when, finding herself in a room, she heard a snoring. She managed to get out without waking the person—probably the cook.

The house search had been successful. She had found a bathroom for the family, a bedroom for the servants and a sitting room. She decided to begin with the latter.

Stepped on Cat.

In the kitchen she stepped on something soft. An unearthly yowl split the silence. It was a cat. In a moment the whole house would be aroused. Let them! She would fight like a cornered lioness. She found the stove in the cook. She found the cook's clothing. Nothing else was wanted. Was that a noise—a step on the floor above? She didn't hesitate. She knew it was fear, panicky fear, that she must conquer.

Down went the pile of her booty. A pair of wool trousers and a coat. A heavy flannel shirt. A cap that would scarcely cover her ears. There was warmth, too, in the coat and vest. Low in the region where she knew her handbag with money should be. She pressed it, picking the loose fold of her make-shift under her coat.

The moon was rising. With it rose her spirits. Then her heart became a mass of lead and had left nothing in her body to animate it.

It would be folly to try to get [illegible]. Her heavy shoes [illegible] Out she went into the [illegible] Once more she found herself in the kitchen. Then she had forgotten—and I have at the keyhole. Quickly each [illegible] had a [illegible]

The front door was open and beyond there were no doors. Of course left to her [illegible] no thought now [illegible]

Her Only Dime.

She circled until she came to the corner from which she had peered up the side of the house to her bath room window. She rested it and it flew [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] careless, steady. For a moment she wrestled with the window. The price of its opening was a rusty nail on a protruded forefinger. She clambered through, no longer afraid, spurred by a strange exhilaration.

A moment later she was in her room again. In the fleeting ecstasy of the dim walnut writing desk she found what she was seeking.

It was a torn envelope in which her numb fingers felt the round [illegible] of a coin. She suddenly [illegible] and [illegible]

The all I need now," she whispered [illegible] into the dark. "My head and [illegible] now. All I need it now.

She crossed the torn envelope in her coat pocket. It was the scrap on which just before she had entered for the first time this house of [illegible] and [illegible] stones. She [illegible] together her horses' [illegible] of her name.

And [illegible] discourage her. Then I need that.

A scrap [illegible] the lucky one. Indeed her [illegible] went out of the bathroom window feet first. From the public road a husky policeman saw [illegible] between himself and the moon, crashy out [illegible] on the street.

The officer was feared no man to be [illegible] a prisoner of Believe [illegible] from a [illegible] and crept up Mr. Hildreth's entrance [illegible] on the [illegible]. He saw he would never leave the house before the burglar got to the ground. He stepped and beckoned.

"Come on, whoever you are or you're a dead man."

Bobbie and His Pa

By William F. Kirk

PA was looking at a little tree out in our yard. Pa planted the tree last Spring & it was dying before it was a year old.

Poor little tree, sed Pa, & yet I suppose it always will.

How can anything be better off wun it is dying? I sed to my Dad.

Well, Bobbie, sed Pa, that little tree will pass away before it has to grow up in this here vall of Tears, sed Pa, & before it has to look on all the sin & suffering & sorrow of this wurld, Bobbie, sed Pa.

But think of all the sunshine it will never see if it does, I sed, & all the bees & birds that will not go nite that poor little tree is ded & gone, I sed.

The tree will never know the differns, Bobbie, sed Pa. It is like a lot of people, Pa sed, it aint sure if it is alive anyhow, sed Pa. One little tree more or less wont malk any differns in the grate skeem of things.

I don't know, I sed, it will malk a differns to that one little tree I hate to think it has to croke, I sed agenn.

You must not say croke wen you mean die, Bobbie, sed Pa.

I herd you say croke lots of times, I sed.

You shud copy my grate & good points, not my litel faleings, Bobbie, sed Pa. You must not use slang. If you do, you may be cut from the list of my friends. I am quite ill now, like that poor little tree.

I aint going to die until I have been President of the Union States, I sed, & you cant be President until you are nearly fifty years old, anyhow, I sed.

Pa laffed at me. What malks you think you are going to be President, Bobbie? sed Pa.

My teacher sed that if I growed up to be as smart as my father I wud very likely be President, I sed.

That was very sweet of your teacher, sed Pa, but I am not sure that she is a good judge of human nature, or she wud never suffi for a newcomer who may be gone tomorrow.

Jane's expression was one of real alarm. "Oh, surely, Millie, he wouldn't be mean enough to hurt poor Jane's feelings that way! Why, she has her heart set on having one of you for the store dance. I didn't lie about it."

"Just what night is there when you don't have a date with Jimmy Lane? You let Jimmy acquire his knowledge of store life like we got ours, by experience! She's the only teacher who can take you past your A, B, C's. Jimmy stands here while you try to tell him everything there is to know about hosiery and he looks at you in that wistful way of his—why, honey, he doesn't hear a word you say. He's watching your pretty face and your little white hands! Quick turnovers, legitimate profits, advantage of sales, all that stuff you are trying to pound into his handsome head, simply doesn't get through. I can tell by the expression of his eyes."

Defends Jimmy.

"You're wrong about that—Jimmy is coming on—he's simply absorbing everything—"

"Everything about you, including your good common sense, Haun is manager here. He makes a fat salary besides his bonus. You don't have to marry him but you can put him for a good thing—Jimmy's got nothing—"

"I don't want to put a man. What are gifts of jewelry or candy to me?"

If you don't want to pull a man then you're not as nice as you're silly. They pull us for a good time. So I get all that's coming to me, sugar face. My little golden feat is—do the man before he does you—"

"Chile No one has done you yet."

"But several have tried. I'm as set as a wrinkle—no massage with soft words can rub me out. Gee, here comes the advance guard of the daily lookers! I'm glad we don't have to give samples in hosiery."

Jimmy Lane met Jane at the side door at luncheon time. It was getting to be a habit of his. "I can't go now," he told her mournfully. "Mr. Haun wants me in the office. Said he wanted to talk over sending me to the Middlesboro branch store the last of this week. If I should have to miss the store dance with you—I'd give up the whole darn works."

"No, you wouldn't!" Jane's eyes were downcast. She was worried but she didn't want him to see how much. "There's a bus every night from over there. Gets you here about eight—takes you back at midnight. It's operated for the theatre crowds. Don't pretend to Mr. Haun that you don't want to go. Just seem pleased about it—"

Such a Little Place

"What would I do without your good advice? Here I am, chucked down in a store when I know nothing about it and told I have to make good. Dad has a store in Maynardville—why didn't he keep me there to teach me what I ought to know."

Jane laughed. "Maynardsville is such a little place, Jimmy. He wants you to go far ahead of him, wants you to be a big merchant in a sure enough town. Why, he probably still sells Jard, shoes and kerosene to the same customers. You've been spoiled a little because he sent you to a big eastern school. He saved pennies to do it, maybe, so you have simply got to make good here."

Jane had just reached the store after luncheon when Mr. Haun again presented himself. "Perhaps you will change your mind about going with me to the dance! Jimmy Lane is leaving for Middlesboro tomorrow."

Jane faced the issue fairly and squarely. "I'll have to see Jimmy before I tell you. He can come over on the bus for the dance."

Mr. Haun smiled grimly. "If that young man attends to his business over there, he won't have time to be running back and forth on a bus line."

He Frowned.

Jane was loyal. "Well, I'll see Jimmy about it and tell you." Later when she told him that Jimmy had decided to attend the dance, he frowned for a minute, then his face brightened. "By the way," he told her, "I'm thinking of transferring you to the millinery, just during the rush season. Miss Millie can manage very well here, I believe."

Jane's heart did a quick somersault "I—" she hesitated, remembered five years business training—"Of course you know I would have to learn the stock up there—hosiery is all I understand." She pulled herself together, mentally. "I think I had better look for work somewhere else, Mr. Haun."

"Oh no," he said suavely. "I'll just put you up there temporarily." "But my customers would forget me here—I've built up my trade—" She was aghast at the sheer meanness of the man. Of course he would do something terrible to Jimmy and Jimmy was trying so hard to make good. "He had been away at college, then a rich uncle has taken him abroad. Then his Dad expected him suddenly to make a spectacular success—that was the way with a country merchant — to think that everything was so easy in a city. A customer came up to the counter. Mr. Haun left. Jane, blinking back angry tears, took down boxes and boxes of hosiery, showed Mags, sand, fawnen al the popular shades. She scarcely saw the people themselves. Finally a voice arrested her attention.

"Do you keep any black stockings here, dear?"

Jane looked up to see the sweet old face of the woman who had ever encouraged her. She jumped around at the pair of bright eyes and red hair and laughed her happy wholesome laughter despite her heartache. "I certainly have, plenty of them." She patted the silky glove hand.

Lifted His Hat.

An old man joined the customer. He lifted his hat to Jane. Then he watched her very intently, heard her tell his wife all about the different brands of hose, saw her patience—his wife was a long time deciding what she wanted. She selected a pair. Jane was getting ready to make out a check when the customer said, "I'll take about three dozen pairs of these, please. I like to have a few pairs to give away occasionally."

Jane had difficulty keeping her surprise to herself when she had another shock. Jimmy came down the aisle and fairly threw himself into the arms of the two. He hugged and patted them. "Just heard this minute that you were here—walking in on me like that—" He stopped short and presented Jane to them. "She's the girl," he announced proudly. "I'd have checked this job months ago if it hadn't been for her. Now, I'm beginning to like it because of her."

They beamed upon Jane. The dear old lady squeezed her hands. The old man went behind the counter to put her slim black satin shoulder in and then it saw Mr. Haun looking down upon them. Jane was almost Mr. Haun waved toll the knowledge that she was ordered behind the counter. She could not leave to see him now.

Well, well, this is a pleasant surprise," said Mr. Haun pompously "Delighted to see you here, Mr. Lane," said this is Mrs. Lane, of course. Is it possible now that you are related to this fine young chap?—You have the same name." Jimmy ... Jimmy and ... Jimmy grinned.

Their Only Son.

"He's just our only son, born to us late in life, and almost idolized. I am thankful that I selected this store out of my chain of dozens of stores, to start my boy, for he has found the very girl to help him along.

"We've been reading his letters and sort of having someone unknown to him, keep an eye on him, too. Now, you see, he's found the right girl if she'll have him." he smiled at Jane, who was blushing furiously "So Jimmy ought to be able to take hold here and manage now, pretty soon. When he can, Haun, I think, I'll transfer you to Middlesboro, temporarily, at least—"

BOSTON RADIO AMERICAN

YOUNG THE GREAT DEMOCRACY OF THE AIR

AROUND THE CIRCUIT

Tonight alas, comes the last of the series of five concerts presented by the Malden Cadet Band through Station WNAC. But as a parting courtesy, and one that will make us all the more sorry that this is the last entertainment by this exceptional band this season, tonight will be a "request night."

Those members of the radio audience who have sent their requests to WNAC will doubtless find the number they admire and wish to hear again on the program, and the selections have been chosen to suit all tastes. There are few bands that have attained the local reputation of the Malden Cadet Band, with its twenty-three talented musicians under the leadership of Franklin Russell. On the program tonight will be such old favorites as "The Poet and Peasant Overture" the "March of the Wooden Soldiers" and the "Old-Timer's Waltz."

WBZ is diverse in its entertainment tonight, swinging all the way from a lecture by Professor Rogers of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology on the subject of G. K. Chesterton, the English author, and a minstrel show broadcasted an hour later at 8:30 o'clock. Pauline Taylor is playing her fiddle, too, and about 10 o'clock the Drum Corps of Shriners' Band will play a request program.

Herbert Hoover, Secretary of Commerce and General Pershing will make speeches from New York through WEEI tonight. The inauguration of the Metropolitan Health Broadcasting Station in the Metropolitan Tower is the occasion and the program will officially open the new studio. Beginning Tuesday morning at 6:45 A. M. and continuing every morning except Sunday, special setting-up exercises will be broadcast from the studio through WEAF, New York; WCAP, Washington, and WEEI, Boston. They say that this will be the largest morning exercise class in the world.

ON THE AIR

Last night could be called a perfect one for that group of fans which appreciates good music. There was plenty of it, from far and near. The suddent flurry of snow which visited us in the late afternoon seemed to liven things up in the air giving a taste of Winter-time reception. On account of the inclement weather outside, it made an ideal night to stay at home and listen in.

Yesterday morning was the occasion of an excellent sermon, preached by Rabbi Levi from Temple Israel, and broadcast through WNAC. The Rabbi gave a common sense idea on "Money," its accumulation, possession and use. After hearing so much talk about the various evils of riches, it was mightily interesting to hear from a man of the clergy about some of the virtues of money.

Receiving conditions last night were as good as one could wish for. There was scarcely any static, and a variety of stations popped in from every direction. You couldn't move a dial without bringing in some program or other. As we said before, it was an ideal evening to listen in—good programs, good conditions and plenty of variety.

The Capitol Theatre program, via WEEI, was better than ever. To describe it best one could perhaps say it consisted of wonderful music, wonderfully played and sung. This man Roxy is certainly a far-sighted individual. Different from a great many theatrical producers, he believes in broadcasting his wares—the more the better. Each week now we are liable to find a few more stations tied in on his Capitol Theatre program. The reason such broadcasting pays is it leaves you with a desire for more of it. Those who engage the uses of broadcasting stations for advertising purposes could learn a lot from Roxy.

On WEEI's broadcast of Dr. Cadman's address yesterday we listened to the greeting given the Redfort Branch Y. M. C. A., by the WEEI Big Brother Club. "Bob" Emery was on the platform with Dr. Cadman and the rest. When he made his little speech they gave him a round of applause which must have made Big Brother feel proud. Dr. Cadman's address was full of its usual "pep." He dwelt largely upon the various crime waves, and the contempt for law and order now rampant in many sections of the country.

Apparently Rudy Wiedoft has joined Roxy's Sunday night gang. At least he was on the job last night with his famous saxophone. He played some of his old compositions as well as one brand new one which had never been broadcast. It seemed good to hear him, particularly so soon after his debut, made recently on one of the Victor Concerts.

PARENTS BLAMED FOR LAWNESSNESS BY EDITOR

"Not the unspanked generation, but the generation that failed to perform its duty is responsible for whatever lawlessness and carelessness the young people of today are guilty of," Dr. W. E. J. Gratz, Chicago, editor of the Epworth Herald and representing the Epworth League of the Methodist Episcopal Church, told the New England annual conference in session here today.

Dr. Gratz said in part:

"It ought to be remembered that the younger generation has come into a world they had no part in building; into a civilization they had no part in constructing and found themselves surrounded with a past they had no part in developing.

"They are criticised because of the kind of books they read, the pictures they like to see, the entertainments and the amusements they indulge in. It ought to be remembered that an older generation wrote and published the books and an older generation developed the pictures, and that the amusements and entertainments the young people indulge in are those created by their elders."

ELLIS ISLAND DENIES IRISH DISCRIMINATION

New York, March 30.—"There is absolutely no discrimination against the Irish," Henry H. Curran, commissioner of immigration, declared in answer to a report of the National Catholic Welfare conference in Washington which stated that 145 young Irishmen had been rejected for heart trouble since August 1924.

"The percentage of Irish rejections is really small," said Commissioner Curran. "Not 100 out of Ireland's annual quota of 28,000 have been sent back for heart trouble."

HAS TWINS, BUT WINS PRIZE FOR X-WORD

31st Daily Puzzle Prize Winners

(Published Tuesday, March 24)

FIRST PRIZE $5

Mrs. Elmer L. Scribner, No. 15 Queensbury street, Boston.

ONE DOLLAR AWARDS

Alistair A. Grahame, No. 27 Hunter avenue, Newport, R. I.
Jerry Carlson, No. 40 Saville avenue, Quincy.
Marion F. Bly, No. 6 Claflin road, Brookline.
Fred Knight, No. 56 North Main street, Fall River.
Mrs. Maud M. Hobein, No. 274 Howard street, Lawrence.

Some women have their hands full caring for one baby but Mrs. Mary Smith of 28 Briggs street, Taunton, has no difficulty in taking care of twins and she also finds time on the side to do the Boston Evening American's Crossword Puzzles. Her twins are sixteen months old.

Not only have many of Mrs. Smith's solutions been correct but three of them during the past thirty-five days, have been so neatly arranged, that they won prizes. She won first prize of five dollars a few days ago and previously won two minor prizes of one dollar each.

TWO IN ONE WEEK.

In telling of her success, Mrs. Smith wrote:

"I wish to thank you for the two awards of one dollar which I received. The last, indeed, was a surprise to me, as I thought I had forgotten something; my babies were bothering me—I have twins, sixteen months old, and I had to finish in a hurry. I enjoy your puzzles and limericks, in fact, my husband and I like your paper very much."

Another person who has won more than one prize in the American's tournament is Lester E. Davis, of 43 Sylvan avenue, Lewiston, Me., who captured two $1.00 prizes in one week. In telling of the thrill he obtained from this experience he wrote:

PERSEVERANCE WINS

"I wish to write you and tell you what a thrill I received last week to find my name on your list of winners not once, but twice. I did not expect to win anyway but to win more than once was away and above my hopes. The money value of the prizes was not large but the fun and pleasure of solving the puzzles and the daily thrill of expectation of finding my name on the list of winners and then the final gratification of that expectation has more than repaid my efforts. The paper itself has given me many minutes of enjoyment in its several departments."

Mildred K. Arey of Salem, another winner, wrote of her success as follows:

"Please accept my heartfelt thanks for your kindness in making me a prize winner. It surely was a thrilling surprise to find my name among the lucky ones, and to realize that my 'smiling perseverance' finally won a reward and it was an added pleasure to prove my theory to my family and friends, who had jokingly assured me that my continuous attempts to win a prize would be fruitless.

"So all that day I wore a smile that would not come off'—and surely gained many friends for your paper with my praise. Let me assure you that I shall eagerly continue in your contest.

LYNN WOMAN, 77, WINS HONOR AS JINGLER

Women continue to be among the most enthusiastic "kick" fans in the Boston Evening American's Tournament, for which prizes totaling $40 daily are offered.

There seems to be no age limit among the women contestants. Isabel Stiles Lynch of No. 165 Union street, Lynn, is believed to be the oldest woman fan competing in the tournament. She is seventy-seven years of age. Despite this ripe old age she is still young in mind as clever last lines she has submitted prove. Mrs. Lynch has always been a believer in the old saying that a person is only as old as she feels.

Miss Carrolyn E. Whittier, No. 53 Winthrop street, Hallowell, Maine, is another of the women limerick fans who is getting lots of fun from the tournament. In telling of the "kick" she got from winning a dollar prize she wrote:

"I just wanted to drop you a line and let you know how tickled I was to see my name in print in the good old Boston American. I have been buying your paper daily for several years and have never missed a copy, but I have never real any thing with greater pleasure and satisfaction than when I read that 'you a truly' had written a last line peppy enough to catch your most hor'ble cheese.

"Just two weeks ago today I sent in my limerick. Just one week ago today I saw my name in black and white that I was to be the proud winner of a one dollar award for my pet 'brain child.'

"Of course, being simply one of the smaller winners is a grand feeling. I am still staying with the order of Limerick writers and hope to top the list one of these days."

Mrs. A. H. Marshall of East Ware, N. H., tells of the surprize and joy that came to her when she learned she was a winner. She wrote:—

"I certainly was surprised and pleased when I received first prize for Limerick No. 6. A member of my family came to me and said, 'A New Hampshire woman won first prize today.' 'Oh that is good,' I said and asked who it was. When I was told I thought they were joking but it was a very real kind of a joke for there it was in black and white and the check came promptly the next day. I never won a Limerick prize before but I like to write them and read the others.'

For clever last lines' submitted to Jesse James by Helen F. Miller of No. 1244 Commonwealth avenue, Allston, Charles McCarthy of No. 58 Church street, Lynn, and Mrs. Helen F. Sykes of No. 47 Waterston avenue, Winthrop, were awarded seats for a performance of which consists of one part of orchestra seats for the performance of 'Little Jesse James' at the Wilbur Theatre.

Orders for these seats were forwarded by special delivery mail. The winners will have the pleasure of witnessing one of the best musical shows that has been produced in Boston this season. It is now in its second week of a return engagement. The winner of a box for the same show, to be given for the best entire original limerick, based upon the theme of the play, or of Jesse James, the Western bandit, will be announced later through the columns of the Boston Evening American.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

There have been floods of requests for special recipes this week and you know it is always a real pleasure to answer each one either by mail or on this page, picking out to broadcast the ones I think seem to have the most general interest.

Mrs. A. R. P. of Brighton says she remembers a gingerbread her mother used to bake on top of the stove. I am sure she means

Recipe No. 1056.
FAIRY GINGERBREAD

1 c. butter, 2 c. sugar, 1 c. milk, 4 c. flour, ¼ tsp. bkg. soda, ½ tsp. ginger.

Rub the butter to a cream; add the sugar gradually, then the soda dissolved in milk, then the ginger, and the flour last. Turn the baking pan upside down. Butter the bottom. Place a layer of the mixture on the buttered pan bottom, and bake on the top of the stove. This is a delicious recipe.

For Mrs. R. J. B. of Roslindale I am glad to give

Recipe No. 1057.
PEACH POLLY

1 qt. preserved peaches (also juice), 2 c. soft bread crumbs, 1 tbsp. lemon juice, ¼ c. sugar, 1 tbsp. butter.

Arrange a layer of peaches in a baking dish. Sprinkle with bread crumbs, a little sugar, and bits of butter. Pour in a little peach juice. Repeat until the dish is full. Add the lemon juice. Bake for 30 minutes. Water may replace the peach juice, and the juice may be used for sauce. Serve with cream.

The daughter of Mrs. M. L. O. writes about a Georgette garment which she wishes to dye but does not want to tint the lace. She asks if it is possible to do this and I am glad to tell her that there is a new [illegible] powder made especially for [illegible] that will tint the lace on the garment. Of course I can't give trade names here but if she will drop me a line I will be glad to tell her of this very new and valuable washing help.

An unusually large number of requests are for dishes appropriate for Sunday night suppers. Cheese dishes always seem to meet with approval of both family and guests, so I am going to give you three Sunday Night Supper cheese recipes.

RECIPE NO. 1058
GREEN PEPPER, CHEESE, AND EGGS

1 green pepper, chopped fine.
Butter, size of a small walnut.
½ cup very rich milk.
1 lb. American cheese, broken small.
6 eggs.

Put the butter and green pepper into a chafing dish and cook for 5 minutes. Add the cheese and stir until it melts; then add the milk into which have been stirred the beaten eggs. Stir all constantly until the mixture is about the consistency of a rare custard. Serve on toast. Stop the fire as soon as the right consistency is reached, as further cooking thickens it rapidly.

It takes about 20 minutes to cook. This will serve 6 good portions.

RECIPE 1059
RUSSIAN RAREBIT

Piece of butter, size of a large English walnut; 1 small onion, chopped fine; 3 slices of green pepper, chopped fine; 1 lb. American cheese, cut small; ½ c. cream, ½ c. stewed tomatoes, 1 tbsp. flour, 1 egg, well beaten, salt, paprika and mustard.

Cook the onion and green pepper in the butter until soft. Add the cheese and half the quantity of cream. Add the seasoning. When the cheese is melted, add the tomatoes. When the rarebit is very smooth, add the flour mixed with the remainder of the cream. Add the egg. Serve on toast or crackers.

RECIPE 1060
SNAPPY CHEESE AND BACON

One package of snappy cheese, 1 or 2 tbsps. Worcestershire sauce, 6 strips of bacon, 6 slices of bread.

Cream the cheese with the Worcestershire sauce until a thick paste; then spread on the slices of bread and lay a strip of bacon on each slice. Cook in a hot oven until the bacon is crisp.

MEDBURY SAYS—

By John P. Medbury

A CALIFORNIA social worker says that a couple never need any money to get married. He's right, when they need it is afterwards.

EXPENSES very seldom start during the engagement. A fellow doesn't have to pay his fiance's grocery bills while he's keeping company with her.

ALL he has to pay is taxicab fares and he marries her to get her used to street cars.

A MAN doesn't very often get a girl who is trolley broke.

THE cost of the average wedding is nine dollars, including the bridegroom's shave and hair cut.

IF he wants a shine it'll be ten cents extra.

IF he's thrifty he'll wait until after the ceremony and let his wife shine them.

A CAREFUL man will never send his laundry out the week before he's going to get married.

HE saves all his washing because he knows his wife won't have anything to do after the wedding.

ONE guy even took seven pairs of socks to church with him so that his bride-to-be could darn them while they were waiting for the minister.

HE was sorry that the church didn't have washtubs in the basement.

HE thought it was a shame that the bride had to waste so much good time sitting down.

HE spent an hour and a half outlining work for her to do when they got home.

BUT he wouldn't show her the list until after the minister had tied the knot.

WHEN they were finally sitting in the street car on their way home from the wedding, he showed her the list. Then she got off at the next corner and saw her lawyer.

FAMOUS FIRSTS

By Mark Stuyvesant

FEMINISTS, female emancipators and all those interested in the the growing independence of women in this day and generation will prick up their ears when they hear that the first woman pleader lived in ancient Rome. Her name was Afrania. She was of such a quarrelsome nature that she was constantly involved in lawsuits and would never engage a lawyer to plead her case. She always insisted on appearing in court herself and pleading her own causes.

It is evident that she was a woman of determined nature and more than confident manner, for women of her clamorous turn were called by her name in a way that was far from complimentary. And a famous historian of the period stigmatizes her with a name such as would never be found in the more restrained annals of our own times. Such a one, then, was the first woman pleader of Rome.

An ancient clay tablet of Babylonia, unearthed and preserved in the British Museum, reveals the fact that somewhere about the year 550 B. C., a woman of Borsippa instituted a legal suit against her brother-in-law, "a man of Babylon," in order to regain the possession of some property which had been left by her deceased husband. It is definitely stated in the tablet that she pleaded her own case unassisted, and although this may not be conclusive proof that she was the first Babylonian woman to do so, it is certainly the earliest record of such a proceeding.

One instance of a woman pleader is found in the early history of the United States. Myra Clark Gaines, forced to plead her own cause in an emergency, won a case against the City of New Orleans which involved several millions of dollars. The case which was being tried before the Louisiana State Judges was brought to a halt while in progress by the resignation of Mrs. Gaines' lawyers. Then the lady, abetted by her husband, General Edmond F. Gaines, demanded the privilege of acting as her own lawyer.

VESTA, THE GODDESS OF THE HOME.

By Foxy Grandpa

"FOXY GRANDPA," said Bobby, "I don't see how those old Greeks and Romans kept their religion straight. They had so many gods and goddesses to worship I should think they could have gotten all mixed up. Think of all the temples they had to go to."

"Yes," I laughed. "But remember that in every home there was a shrine or an altar to a goddess."

"A shrine built in every home—what do you mean, Foxy Grandpa?" asked Bobby.

"The goddess of the home was named Vesta, which really means home-fire or hearth. She presided over every home and the fire in each home was consecrated to Vesta."

"Tell me about her," urged Bobby.

"To begin with, Vesta despised all romance and sentiment. She didn't believe in falling in love or getting married, although Poseidon and Apollo both wanted to marry her.

"Vesta was very much loved by the Greeks. She was worshipped in every home, and in every public building, as well as in every home, there was a sacred fire consecrated to Vesta.

"If a party of colonists started out to settle in a new country, they always carried along some of the fire from one of the altars of Vesta."

"I suppose they carried it in a thing like plumbers carry their fire around," suggested Bobby.

"That I don't know," I laughed. "But they did carry it. And if a sacred fire ever went out it had to be lit from another of Vesta's altars.

"In Rome there was a temple to Vesta, and there were six priestesses or Vestal virgins who tended the fire and kept it burning."

"Oh, yes, I remember," said Bobby. "They were from high Roman families, and if they met a condemned man in the street they could have him pardoned. And weren't they the girls that had front row seats at the Olympic games and at the circus?"

"They were the ones," I laughed, "but they had a great responsibility.

"If they allowed the sacred fire to go out they had to relight it by allowing the rays of the sun to shine through a crystal ball — and then they were put into a dark chamber and flogged."

"Ugh," said Bobby.

"In Rome, at this temple, on the 1st of March each year, the sacred fire was renewed, and on the 15th of June the temple was cleaned and repaired."

"Kind of late for Spring housecleaning," murmured Bobby.

"Yes, to us," I chuckled. "But before they had the general house cleaning the whole city celebrated in a kind of a carnival."

"Foxy Grandpa," said Bobby, looking into my eyes very seriously, "wasn't it too bad they didn't know the song, 'Keep the Home Fires Burning,' to sing at those celebrations?"

FINANCE

—By B. C. FORBES—

Stocks, grain, cotton, all act as if uncertain which course to take, upwards or downwards.

Business displays similar hesitancy.

But things never stay static very long in this impulsive country. Some definite trend or trends will be sure to develop.

The big question is: In which direction?

Recent happenings on the various exchanges are entirely logical. Wheat and other grains were inflated to abnormal heights on exaggerated statements of an impending famine. The advance in stocks, thoroughly warranted in its earlier stages, was carried quite far by the beginning of this month.

Dazzling profits attracted speculators as a street lamp attracts insects. Day after day dabblers on both the stock exchanges and the grain exchange found themselves piling up paper profits. Success emboldened them to become more adventurous. Also, their success incited others to join this money-making picnic.

All this brought about a vulnerable speculative structure. Even had no unsettling outside developments occurred, the bull movement unquestionably would have begun to totter sooner or later.

But unfavorable happenings came along and caused both stock and grain speculation to crumble.

The revelation that President Coolidge could not muster up enough votes in the Senate to have his nominations and recommendations made effective caused astonishment and something akin to dismay. Many financial and business world had assumed that President Coolidge had a workable majority and that his will and his program would prevail.

The throwing of one of the nation's great transcontinental railroad systems into bankruptcy not only caused a collapse in the St. Paul's own securities but, because of the reasons officially given for the receivership, created misgivings as to the position and outlook of other transcontinental roads. This naturally brought selling of securities.

The iron industry reported some slackening of orders, and pessimistic comments were recorded. The oil industry, after repeatedly painting reassuring pictures of the outlook, ran into fresh overproduction and price-cutting broke out. Automobile production, monthly reports showed, was running behind a year ago. From certain centres came admissions that the building boom was slowing down. The copper industry found itself compelled to curtail its output except at price concessions, with the consequence that the red metal is today at the lowest price level of the year, with lead, brass, zinc, and tin also suffering. Sugar has been experiencing a spell of weakness.

Last week the Federal Reserve Board issued a report that production in basic industries had been declining since January. It also revealed that the member banks of the system had expanded their loans on stocks and bonds this month to the highest figure ever reached.

In the face of the foregoing, it is not astonishing that speculative exuberance has suffered a cold douche.

But what of the future?

This much can be said without qualification: both securities and commodities are on a sounder and safer level today than they were several weeks ago.

No human being can predict dogmatically what will be the status of stocks or grain or business one month or three months from now. One can only form an opinion—and business is now so conducted that a great many individuals and concerns are compelled to analyze the outlook and enter into future commitments in accordance with their best judgment.

Each person must do his own deciding. For my part, I believe it will prove quite as dangerous to act on the assumption that things are going to grow worse and worse as it would be to act on the theory that the worst is already over.

After some more recovery, present conditions are such that some degree of improvement should be witnessed. And it is still within the realm of possibility that very great improvement will be witnessed.

NEW ENGLAND BUSINESS IS GOOD

By FRANK H. MELOON,
Financial Editor.

Chairman Frederic H. Curtiss, of the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston, says: "Business activity in New England continues at a fairly high rate—higher, in fact, than at this time last year, and not much below the peak reached in the early part of 1923. The bank's Index of Business Activity was slightly higher in February than in January, making the only allowance for the shorter working month and the normal Winter slackening in some lines. Preliminary reports covering the early part of March show that activity remained at substantially the February rate.

"New England mill consumption of both wool and cotton during February was less than in January, but cotton consumption was higher than in February last year, while wool consumption was lower. New England shoe production increased in February, but was less than a year ago.

"The building industry has been more active during this past Winter than in either of the two previous years. There was an increase in the value of contracts awarded for all types of construction in February, as compared with January, whereas normally there is a seasonal decrease. Approximately 50 per cent. of the contracts were for residences. Several of the building trades in Boston have made new agreements, extending the present wage scale for three years.

"The numbers of workers employed at representative establishments increased in February, and a larger proportion of the employes were on fulltime schedules."

The writer finds New England figures for building operations continue to show construction activities setting high marks. For the last reported week these figures were $7,728,600, the largest in six years with exception of 1924, when for the like week new construction to the amount of $7,832,000 was reported. February building permits for 39 Massachusetts cities, according to compilation just completed, show a gain of more than 20 per cent over those for February, 1924.

Paper trade is active in all lines. Hide and leather market is slow. Wool market has been easier, but improvement is confidently expected to result in increase in sales at the current level.

BALDWIN AND STEEL TOUCH NEW LOWS

Baldwin and U. S. Steel were among several issues that sold at new lows in New York Stock Exchange trading. The volume of dealings was relatively light.

Weak spots included iron products, Remington Typewriter, American Hide & Leather preferred, United Fruit and Texas Gulf Sulphur, off 2 to 4 points.

A slight recovery set in around noon, U. S. Steel moving back to 115 and Baldwin, American Can, Mack Truck and Texas Gulf Sulphur rallying a point or so from their low figures. Call money renewed at 4½ per cent., the scarcity of supplying reflecting the heavy month-end demand for funds.

New 1925 low records included Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Smelting, Pullman, Baltimore & Ohio, Reading, Canadian Pacific and Rock Island.

Coppers reflected further weakness in the red metal market in Boston Stock Exchange trading today, Calumet & Hecla sold off ½ at 18, U. S. Smelting down ⅝ at 35, Quincy ⅛ lower at 32, and Kennecott off a point at 44¼, the last named a new low for the year.

Bingham Mines at 23⅝ touched a new low for the year.

Boston & Maine was up ⅛ at 15. Boston Elevated sold unchanged at 76. Eastern Mass. St. Ry adjustments were unchanged at 43½. Trading locally was dull.

Both exports and imports to and from all sections showed a slight gain as compared to those in the same month in 1924. There was a decided falling off in imports from North American countries, but those from South America increased slightly.

Let Governor Fuller End Drinking Driver Menace

New England Should Be First to Rid Highway of Jugglers With Human Lives

His Excellency the Governor of Massachusetts is gazing today into the face of a great opportunity and a grave obligation. He is the man of the hour in the midst of a public emergency. He is the ranking elective officer on Beacon Hill who represents his fellow citizens of Massachusetts in their corporate capacity as the self-governing people of one of the indestructible States of the indestructible Union. The people are within their constitutional right, therefore, when they look to their Governor for leadership.

To articulate public sentiment against the gambler in human life, who, while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, operates an automobile on a public highway—the drinking driver—is Governor Fuller's opportunity. To obey the mandate of public sentiment in this regard is Governor Fuller's obligation. If he embraces his opportunity and shoulders his obligation, Governor Fuller can with the assistance of the Legislature and judicial branches of the government end the public emergency in Massachusetts which has been created by coddling the first offender against the law barring the public highway to the automobile driver under the influence of intoxicating liquor.

If Governor Fuller will go before the two houses of the Massachusetts Legislature now in session and address to them a demand that they write into the existing law a provision compelling the courts to impose a jail sentence upon every person found guilty, after a fair trial, of operating an automobile while under the influence of intoxicating liquor, public sentiment will support the Governor, if we read aright the righteous indignation of the people.

If the Massachusetts Legislature supports the leadership of the Governor by so amending the law, public sentiment will support the Legislature.

Under the governance of the law thus amended, the duty of the judges, and the juries, and the district attorneys of Massachusetts will be as plain as day, and if they do their duty, they, too, will have the support of public sentiment.

A cowardly jury that attempts to lynch the law by disobeying its mandate can be discharged from further service.

A crooked district attorney who fails to prosecute offenders against the law can be removed from office.

A jellyfish on the bench who flinches from imposing the penalty that the law provides can and ought to be removed by the Governor upon the address of the Legislature, and public sentiment will support his removal.

Why? Because public sentiment is overwhelmingly against the drinking driver, and "public sentiment is" what Abraham Lincoln said it was—"everything."

If Governor Fuller and the Massachusetts Legislature will embrace their common opportunity and shoulder their common obligation, the public emergency created by the drinking driver will be brought to an end without undue delay.

Other New England Governors and their Legislatures can then be compelled, by the power of public sentiment, to go and do likewise. Then the Governors and Legislatures of New England will have earned for the region the distinction of leading the nation in ridding its public highways of the reckless gambler in other people's lives—the drinking driver of an automobile on the public highway.

Does Bay State Want Babies?

Make the Maternity Period Comfortable for Even the Poorest of Poor Mothers

It is all well enough to cry out against blocs, and to decry "organized minorities," but if the Mothers' Benefit bill, now once more upon the calendar of the Massachusetts Senate, had a properly supported organization behind it, it would not have taken all these years to make a place for it in the laws.

What IS the Mothers' Benefit bill?

"An act to prevent forever the placing of the stigma of pauperism upon the holy state of motherhood."

The bill provides for the paying of maternity benefits to any woman who is found to be without the means of providing ordinary and proper care for herself or her infant. She may receive a sum not in excess of twelve dollars a week, but must abstain from gainful employment while receiving cash benefits.

Year after year, the campaign for the Mothers' Benefit bill has been led by Miss Edna Lawrence Spencer of Cambridge, a brave little woman who will NOT admit discouragement.

"Nothing is more vital to the welfare of the race," Miss Spencer says, "than the care of the expectant mother and her child, yet here in Massachusetts, birthplace of so much that is best in truly progressive legislation, we leave to chance care and the cold hand of charity those mothers who have insufficient means to meet the needs of maternity."

Annually, for several years now, Edna Spencer has been saying something like that through the columns of the Boston Evening American. Legislators promise to support her bill and then vote the other way. They agree to speak for measure and are "unavoidably absent," the day it comes up for debate. "Poor fellows!" she says, "they MEAN all right; perhaps they will be with me next year!"

How can a woman like that be defeated?

"Every humanitarian measure of the sort," the lady says, "has had a similar history of temporary defeat, postponement, setback, unfavorable committee reports.

"The thing to do is keep the subject alive, keep it before the people. They will wake up some day, the lawmakers will hear from them, all the newspapers will say something and Massachusetts will wonder why there wasn't such legislation years and years ago."

Senate Bill No. 169 will, as Miss Spencer says, remedy a shameful situation. We earnestly hope the Senate of 1925 does it.

A WIFE'S MEDITATIONS

By HELEN ROWLAND

"AMERICAN husbands are the best in the world—but the American wife is heartless," remarks one of our foreign critics.

IZZAT SO! It is not!

* * *

Just because a woman keeps her husband's nose to the grindstone is no sign that she's heartless! Her heart may ACHE for him, at the very moment when she's running up a big millinery bill against him, or drag glass him out to a dinner-dance against his will.

Helen Rowland

In fact, it does ache for him—lots and lots of times.

* * *

It aches for him, when she watches him go off to work, and shuts the door behind him on a near-blizzard, while she walks back to the cozy warmth of her steam-heated "cage."

* * *

When she watches him climb out of the car in the mud to put on the chains or change a tire and sees him struggle with a jack, while she takes out her novel and snuggles down into the robes.

* * *

When she watches him eat canned soup and scrambled eggs for dinner, while she is still tasting in memory the broiled squab that she enjoyed at the bridge luncheon.

* * *

When he gets up in the middle of the night to see what the noise is and she hears him bumping against the hall console, while she slides down under the covers and hugs the hot-water bottle.

* * *

When she watches him put his toe through a thin place in his sock, while she draws on her new five-dollar silk hose, or helps him into his old raincoat, while she wraps herself in her new sables.

* * *

When she watches him lie down, hands crossed on his breast, in an effort to snatch a few minutes' sleep, before taking her out for the evening, and reflects on her "perfect day" devoted to a marcelle, a manicure, a fitting, a mudpack, and a beauty-nap.

* * *

When she sees him bunting all over the house for a sacred corner in which to park his pet pipe, and watches him huddle his clothes, his golf sticks and his fishing outfit into ONE closet, while she spreads her belongings all over three.

* * *

When she watches him mail the check for the insurance—(But there!

* * *

Don't say that the American wife is heartless—DON'T!

* * *

Every day of her life, her tender heart is torn for that uncomplaining martyr who makes her feel like a parasite, a pet canary and a slave owner, all in one.

* * *

She knows—SHE knows, SHE KNOWS what she's doing!

* * *

She knows that every man is at heart, either a martyr or a tyrant—and, if you don't keep him slaving for you, he will soon be bossing you off the reservation.

* * *

But, it breaks her heart to have to do it!

THE RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

SOME love the days when the skies are clear and the woodlands are sweet with song, windswept days when the Spring is here and the daisies and violets throng. Some love the Summer's languid hours, with the hush of the golden noons, air that is heavy with breath of flowers when the south wind softly croons. Some love the Autumn's fading leaf, love the haze on the distant hills, love the scarlet and gold of a reign too brief and the beauty that haunts and thrills. Naught spells the charm of a field in flower or the sparkle of snow to me; yours is the grace that must touch the hour and your smile sets the sunshine free. Some love the days when the skies are clear and the robins and linnets sing, but it's only on days when you are near that my heart knows the joy of Spring.

GROWING OF UNITY SEEN ABROAD

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A REPORT has it that German music hall artists are to appear again in French places of entertainment.

No more significant piece of news could be announced.

It is true that they have already performed in French music halls, but they had to disguise themselves as Poles, Czecho-Slovaks, as Swiss, as anything but Germans.

The French would have none of them. The French artists expressed their indignation at regular intervals, in public and semi-public meetings, and swore that never again should a German attraction be seen in Paris.

And now they have suddenly quit. They are declaring that they are disinterested and that they have no objection to the reappearance of German entertainment.

Hatred and grudges die out. They cannot live forever, and possibly this is a better indication of their disappearance than the study of protocols and treaties would reveal. The statesman and his deeds amount to much, but what the people and the caterers to the people's amusement do in such a matter amounts to still more.

Even when the Olympic Games were held in Paris a short time ago there were no German competitors. At that time German athletes and German music hall entertainers were not welcome in the French capital.

Now we learn that Germans are to sit upon the committee to make arrangements for the Olympic Games of 1928. The German cyclists are to race in Paris and German football players are to compete with Frenchmen.

We are to hope that if, in the realm of sports and amusement, there is a renewal of friendship, it will not be long before there is a renewal in the political atmosphere.

Protection cannot be practiced in amusement. There must be free trade. The art of entertainment has no boundaries.

EARTHQUAKES CAUSED BY "FAULTS"

By Garrett P. Serviss.

Noted Astronomer and Writer on Scientific Topics of Popular Interest.

THE earthquake shock that surprised New York and the East on February 28 has been traced by some geologists to a great "fault" in the rocks of sealed bording the land from Nova Scotia to the northeastern corner of Massachusetts, and by others to a similar "fault" running down from Canada via the Champlain depression into the Allegheny region.

The first is called the "Fundian fault" because it runs along the western side of the famous Bay of Fundy, old Blomidon itself being a part of the huge bluff created by the rock-slip, and the second is known as "Logan's fault" from the name of its discoverer.

The Fundian fault has only been known to geologists since it was located by Professor D. W. Johnson, of Columbia University, about three years ago. But this, of course, does not mean that it is of recent formation.

Now, that its existence has been discovered, a number of quakes felt in past time have been laid at its door. But Logan's fault has also been accused of responsibility for some of the same disturbances.

Leaving the geologists to settle the question of blame, suppose we inquire what they mean by a "fault" and how they connect it with earthquakes.

A fault is defined by Prof. William J. Miller as: A fracture in the earth's crust accompanied by movement of the rock on one side of the break past that on the other.

If the fracture is inclined and the rock on one side appears to have slid down the slope, it is called a normal fault. If the rock on one side appears to have been shoved up the inclined plane of the break it is termed a reverse, or thrust, fault.

What produces these breaks in the rocky crust? We can only answer in a word, that they result from rising or sinking movements caused by pressures and stresses inside the earth, the origin of which we have not space here to discuss.

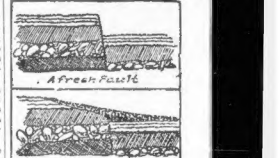
The larger type of faults are generally complex and run along for hundreds of miles, and the uplift or downfall of the rocky strata may amount in places to hundreds or even thousands of feet.

Long lines of bluffs or cliffs sometimes owe their origin to a fault, and coast lines may be determined by them. The very great changes of level caused by faults, however, occurred in the geological past, those happening today being measured by yards, feet, or even little as inches. They are mere slips along the faces of old faults.

There is no difficulty in seeing how such dislocations of the underpinning of the earth's surface produce earthquakes. Usually the slip, or break, occurs at a considerable depth below the surface, so that the shock is felt at great distances from the point of disturbance.

Seismographs are instruments which by recording the direction and intensity of the vibrations serve to fix the location of the center from which the earthwaves proceed.

Often this can be determined with surprising accuracy, though it may be hundreds or thousands of miles away, and at a point deep in the earth, or beneath the ocean bottom.



A Fresh Fault

Same Fault concealed by Weathering

The way in which the geologist recognizes a fault is illustrated in our picture. The rocks of the earth's crust generally lie in superposed strata, really distinguishable from one another by their appearance, as shown in the picture.

Now when a break occurs and the strata on one side of the break sink or rise with reference to those on the other, a great precipice, or line of cliffs is formed on the surface where the strata have been fractured. This is illustrated by the upper part of the picture.

But as the centuries and ages go on, the action of rains, rivers and other aerial agencies breaks down the cliffs, fills up the gap and levels off the surface, so that at last a fault may be completely concealed under a gently sloping hillside which has taken the place of the great escarpment formed by the fault.

But in such cases the character of the neighboring rocks on the surface may lead the geologist to examine the state of things below, and then the hidden fault is disclosed like by them. The very great changes

FORGETFULNESS OFTEN DUE TO MENTAL LAZINESS.

It is becoming more and more difficult for you to retain facts which you should remember accurately.

Isn't it because you have not exercised your brain sufficiently and you have become so mentally lazy that you are not even aware of the fact.

It is hard for you to remember because it is difficult for you to try to remember. You cannot charge your memory with a certain thing and say that you will not forget it.

"At times I am alarmed over my condition and I wonder if I am going to get so that I cannot remember anything!" said one man recently.

This man worries because it seems almost impossible for him to remember unless he first writes it down.

Asked how he reached such a condition, he told more than he knew when he admitted that it had never annoyed him if he could not remember, for usually he could ask someone or look it up in a book. But now he finds his mind practically useless in the simplest matters.

Tools will rust from lack of use.

Your mind will not function properly unless you exercise it. Learn some new facts every day and remember them.
